

Safe Manual Handling

Introduction

Legislation

The Health and Safety at Work Act 1974 requires employers to ensure the health and safety of their employees and to provide them with the necessary information, instruction, training and supervision to enable them to do so. The Health and Safety Regulations 1992 require employers to assess the risks to the health and safety of their employees from the work they do and to take steps to prevent or reduce those risks.

Types of injury

The spine is a jointed structure with a lot of flexibility. It is made up of vertebrae and intervertebral discs. The discs are the cushions between the vertebrae. They are made of a soft, jelly-like substance called nucleus pulposus. The discs are surrounded by a tough, fibrous ring called the annulus fibrosus.

- Back pain - This is the most common type of injury. It can be caused by a variety of factors, including poor posture, heavy lifting, and repetitive movements.
- Strain - This is an injury to the muscles or ligaments. It can be caused by overexertion or by a sudden movement.
- Spinal disc herniation - This is a condition in which a disc in the spine has ruptured, causing the nucleus pulposus to push out and press against the spinal cord or nerves.

Anywhere in the musculo-skeletal system can be injured

Risk Assessment

The purpose of this assessment is to identify the risks to the health and safety of employees from the work they do. It is a process of identifying the hazards of the work, assessing the risks, and taking steps to prevent or reduce those risks.

- 1. Identify the hazards of the work.
- 2. Assess the risks of the work.
- 3. Take steps to prevent or reduce the risks.

The assessment should be carried out and the assessment should be updated regularly

- Identify the hazards - This is the first step in the risk assessment process. It involves identifying the hazards of the work, such as heavy lifting, repetitive movements, and poor posture.
- Assess the risks - This is the second step in the risk assessment process. It involves assessing the risks of the work, such as the likelihood of an injury occurring and the severity of the injury.
- Take steps to prevent or reduce the risks - This is the third step in the risk assessment process. It involves taking steps to prevent or reduce the risks, such as providing training, using equipment, and changing the way the work is done.

- Control measures - These are the steps that are taken to prevent or reduce the risks. They can include things like providing training, using equipment, and changing the way the work is done.
- Monitoring and review - This is the final step in the risk assessment process. It involves monitoring the risks and reviewing the control measures to ensure they are still effective.

- Record the results - This is the final step in the risk assessment process. It involves recording the results of the assessment and the control measures that have been taken.
- Communicate the results - This is the final step in the risk assessment process. It involves communicating the results of the assessment to the employees and the management.
