New Funding Model to Streamline University Education - PS

The Department of Education (DepEd) has announced a new funding model for higher education institutions, aimed at streamlining university education. The model, known as the Performance-Based Funding (PBF) system, will be implemented in the coming years. It is designed to provide a more transparent and efficient way of allocating funds to universities, based on their performance and the quality of their education. The PBF system will take into account various factors, such as the number of students enrolled, the quality of faculty, and the research output of the institution. This new model is expected to encourage universities to improve their performance and provide a better quality of education to their students.
