Genetically Engineered Foods Armando Mills, 2019-08-13 Genetically modified foods are foods derived from genetically modified organisms have had specific changes introduced into their DNA by genetic engineering techniques The main aim of genetically modified crops is to produce a food that is able to survive even if any harmful chemicals or pesticides or herbicides are sprayed Genetically engineered foods have had their DNA changed using genes from other plants or animals Scientists take the gene for a desired trait in one plant or animal and they insert that gene into a cell of another plant or animal Genetic engineering can be done with plants animals or bacteria and other very small organisms Genetic engineering allows scientists to move desired genes from one plant or animal into another Genes can also be moved from an animal to a plant or vice versa Genetic engineering also helps speed up the process of creating new foods with desired traits Genetically modified material sounds a little bit like science fiction territory but in reality much of what we eat on a daily basis is a genetically modified organism Whether or not these modified foods are actually healthy is still up for debate and many times you don't even know that you are buying something genetically modified The book will be of help to researcher in the field of agriculture crop improvement biotechnology etc It will also be helpful to teachers and students for better understanding of the subject

Guidance Document on Measurement Uncertainty for GMO Testing Laboratories, 2009 This technical report outlines the technical issues related to the estimation of measurement uncertainty MU involved in the GMO sector In particular it gives guidance to GMO testing laboratories how to estimate the analytical variability of quantitative analytical results obtained by real time PCR This guidance document has been written on request of the European Network of GMO Laboratories ENGL as a follow up of a workshop on Measurement Uncertainty in the GMO sector organised by the Institute for Reference Materials and Measurements IRMM Geel Belgium and held on 05 07 2005 It is recognised that in order to be able to judge if an analytical results exceeds a threshold the MU must be estimated and reported together with the measurement result Enforcement Authorities shall therefore estimate the MU associated with an analytical result and use it to decide whether an analytical result falls within the specification of food and feed control The value obtained by subtracting the expanded uncertainty from the reported concentration is used to assess compliance Only if this value is greater than the legal threshold it is sure beyond reasonable doubt that the sample concentration of the analyte is beyond what is permissible Two selected approaches for the estimation of MU are presented in detail references to alternative approaches are given The first approach presented in detail is using data from collaborative trial in combination with in house quality control data for the estimation of MU Prerequisites for the use of such collaborative trial data are outlined In case no suitable collaborative trial data are available an alternative approach using data from within laboratory samples for the estimation of MU is presented
