Q.2. (A) Read the following extract and answer the questions given below:

(11)

Was it tough to sell this idea or were you fortunate to find someone easily, who believed in you?

It was very tough to find a publisher. I went to several publishers but didn't find any takers. Finally, Mr. Mirchandani, the proprietor of IBH (Indian Book House) understood my mission and offered me a small contract in early 1967. I immediately resigned from The Times of India and grabbed the opportunity.

What kinds of challenges did you face in this pursuit?

Many. I can't even begin. Our main challenge was to strike a balance between scholarly research, educational values, honest depiction of the past, national integration, targeting and marketing.

What were the sources from which you researched these stories?

My team and I read the original versions and the Hindi translations of Indian scriptures and mythological texts issued by Gita Press, Gorakhpur - a leading religious books publisher founded in 1923.

Then, I read the Vedas and original version of Valmiki Ramayana, Tulsidas' Ram CharitManas, Krittivas Ramayan - the Bengali Ramayana written by Krittivas and Kambaramayanam - the Tamil version of Ramayana written by the Tamil poet, Kambar.

How long did it take on an average, to research the stories and come up with a short yet precise version of any story?

In case of mythology there are many versions of the same story. Gradually, when I became aware of this reality, I realized I had a huge responsibility. Because of our growing knowledge in this field, I found that we had become even more meticulous.

Historical stories, biographies and mythology took several months of research. For example, the Laxman Rekha episode is not there in either Valmiki Ramayan or Ramcharitmanas. This episode was the invention of Krittivas! We did a lot of reading and research to decide whether to include it in the Amar Chitra Katha version.

Questions :

- (1) Which publisher first offered a contract to Shri Anant Pai?
- (2) In case of mythology, what challenges did Anant Pai and his team face?
- (3) How did the writer and his team ensure that the stories were accurate?
- (4) Have you read historical stories or biographies? Why do you think some versions differ from the others?
