Media and Health Clive Seale, 2003-01-17 This book appears to fill a substantial gap in the literature at present There are quite simply no books available which engage seriously and competently with the presentation of health issues in the media and certainly none which focuses on representations of health and illness in as thematically coherent a manner as Seale proposes to do Richard Gwyn University of Cardiff This is an excellent resource for students It provides a comprehensive review of secondary literature in the field and is very well researched Students of sociology of health and illness and in media and communication studies will find the book invaluable David Oswell Goldsmiths College University of London This is a comprehensive work on media health providing an invaluable toolkit for understanding health and the media in contemporary society Seale goes further than previous textbooks critiquing the lament of media health promoters in order to explore the moralisation and commercialisation of media health Dr Annette Hill University of Westminster How are health matters presented by the mass media How accurate are the messages we are receiving This book demonstrates how health messages in popular mass media are important influences in our lives and that they are not neutral being subject to many determining influences It demonstrates the importance of mass media for understanding the experience of illness health and health care bringing together the latest thinking in the field of media studies and the sociology of health and illness This book provides a thorough review of research literature on media representations of health illness and health care covering their production characteristic forms and relationships with the everyday lives of media audiences It brings together both well known and lesser known studies in the context of an integrated sociological argument about media and health Media producers are subject to a variety of influences from medical lobbies scientific organizations and not least the commercial pressure to satisfy media saturated audiences These mean that aims of health promoters are not always easily achieved leading to considerable tensions that require a deeper understanding of media health than has hitherto been applied to them This book will be essential reading for health educators and promoters as well as health care providers interested in the cultural aspects of health sociologists of health and illness and students and academics of media studies

The Routledge Companion to Media and Class Erika Polson, Lynn Schofield Clark, Radhika Gajjala, 2019-11-27 This companion brings together scholars working at the intersection of media and class with a focus on how understandings of class are changing in contemporary global media contexts From the memes of and about working class supporters of billionaire populists to well publicized and critiqued philanthropic efforts to bring communication technologies into developing country contexts to the behind the scenes work of migrant tech workers class is undergoing change both in and through media Diverse and thoughtfully curated contributions unpack how media industries digital technologies everyday media practices and media studies itself feed into and comment upon broader interdisciplinary discussions They cover a wide range of topics such as economic inequality workplace stratification the sharing economy democracy and journalism globalization and mobility migration Outward looking intersectional and highly contemporary The Routledge Companion to Media and Class is a must read for students and researchers interested in the intersections between media class sociology technology and a changing world

Risk and Crisis Communication Timothy L. Sellnow, Robert Littlefield, 2015-11-05 Risk and Crisis Communication addresses how the interaction between organizations and their stakeholders manifests during a risk or crisis situation Littlefield and Sellnow contend that when best practices are considered there are certain tensions to which an organization responds These tensions are similar to those experienced among individuals when managing their relationships As such Littlefield and Sellnow apply an interpersonal theory known as relational dialectics RDT to risk and crisis communication and examine the outcome from the vantage point of the officials and the public Previous research has focused on top down sender oriented communication to evaluate the effectiveness of particular strategies used by spokespeople to repair public image or relay an apology In contrast Littlefield and Sellnow's approach relies on culture centeredness and suggests how cultural elements may have influenced the kinds of tensions each organization faced Risk and Crisis

Communication exemplifies the use of RDT through seven case studies each focusing on one of the tensions making it of interest to both scholars and organizational leaders

Media, Culture and Human Violence Jeff Lewis, 2015-11-18 Humans of the advanced world are the most violent beings of all times This violence is evident in the conditions of perpetual warfare and the accumulation of the most powerful and destructive arsenal ever known to humankind It is also evident in the devastating impact of advanced world economy and cultural practices which have led to ecological devastation and the current era of mass species extinction one of only six mass extinction events in planetary history and the only one caused by the actions of a single species humans This violence is manifest in our interpersonal relationships and the ways in which we organize ourselves through hierarchical systems that ensure the wealth and privilege of some against the penury and misery of others In this new and highly original book Jeff Lewis argues that violence is deeply inscribed in human culture thinking and expressive systems media Lewis contends that violence is not an inescapable feature of an aggressive human nature Rather violence is laced through our desires and dispositions to communalism and expressive interaction From the near extinction of all Homo sapiens around 74 000 years ago the invention of culture and media enabled humans to imagine and articulate particular choices and pleasures Organized intergroup violence or warfare emerged through the exercise of these choices and their expression through larger and increasingly complex human societies This agitation of amplified desire hierarchical social organization and mediated knowledge systems has created a cultural volition of violent complexity which continues into the present Media Culture and Human Violence examines the current conditions of conflict and harm as an expression of our violent complexity Gender, Communications, and Reproductive Health in

International Development Carolina Matos,2023-06-15 To this day women globally are subjected to forms of control over their bodies and their ability to exercise their reproductive rights in particular is still constrained Amid a rise of challenges to the advancement of women s rights including the recent overturning of Roe v Wade in the United States sexual and reproductive health rights are at the forefront of conversations about the advancement of gender equality To determine how communications are used strategically to shape policy Carolina Matos explores fifty two feminist and health NGOs from across the world and how they are improving discourse on sexuality and reproductive health in the public sphere She investigates how these organizations are making use of communications amid various contemporary challenges including the proliferation of misinformation about women s rights and health in the public sphere due to the actions of oppositional far right nationalist groups Through original in depth interviews within the NGOs and empirical research of the institutions online presences Matos unpacks the complexities of the relationship between women s health communications and development contributing to the fields of development health communications and gender studies and advancing the debate on the role of feminist NGOs in advocating for women s rights With a postcolonial critique of the role of NGOs in development Matos illuminates the strategic use of communications in the mediation and advocacy of gender equality and reproductive health Children's Healthcare and Parental Media Engagement in Urban China Qian Gong,2016-10-25 This book analyses parental anxieties about their children s healthcare issues in urban China engaging with wider theoretical debates about modernity risk and anxiety It examines the broader social cultural and historical contexts of parental anxiety by analysing a series of socio economic changes and population policy changes in post reform China that contextualise parental experiences Drawing on Wilkinson s 2001 conceptualisation linking individual s risk consciousness to anxiety this book analyses the situated risk experiences of parents and grandparents looking particularly into their engagement with various types of media It studies the representations of health issues and health related risks in a parenting magazine popular newspapers commercial advertising and new media as well as parents and grandparents engagement with and response to these media representations By investigating a culture of anxiety among parents and grandparents in contemporary China thisbook seeks to add to the scholarship of contemporary parenthood in a non Western context
