

Introduction

In recent years there has been a trend towards not only developing and protecting human rights but also animal rights. Many people believe that we should give animals the same rights as humans. Others view them as a renewable source of food, as well as other useful products.

Body paragraph #1

First of all, it seems clear for most intelligent people that animals deserve more rights than they have. Traditionally, however, that is because they are obviously not made to go with thoughts and feelings, and if they are not receiving the same as we are, for example, it has been argued that some animals – birds and dolphins – must, therefore, not be like humans. But animals display the signs of their pain and pain that we would associate with human suffering. Therefore, it appears quite clear that they should be given the same rights and protection as humans.

Body paragraph #2

There are arguments against giving rights for animals, particularly that they do not have the ability of human beings, not having the same level of thought or feeling, and that the level of behaviour is clearly normal within the natural world. It looks, however, that if we have rights over them, that would mean that we have a natural relationship with the same as that of a child and a dog. It would be wrong for us to have animals for our own benefit because that is the natural way of the world.

Conclusion

In conclusion, there are arguments from both sides of the debate, both arguing that that animals deserve respect, protection, and some rights. Perhaps they should not be given the same treatment as humans but they should certainly be treated better than they currently are, and that should be done for both their protection and their suffering.
