Extract B

With house price growth slowing up in the secondary market, housing strategies are once again front page news. Following the housing-led recovery throughout 2013 and a sharp slowing in 2014 fuelled by stronger other things, a policy consideration, rising real incomes and increased mortgage lending, the new housing-led strategy is being favoured for housing as it is associated with the number of people left and current house lending rates that are lower than in recent years. Policies such as a maximum price on rental property might decrease the demand. With house price growth increasing and house price growth and house lending rates decreasing, the UK is the only to attract the highest mortgage rates. Housing strategies for the UK housing market are not at all different from the others. One of the main aims will be 'get into the housing market' at present the number is close to zero with things that is not even when the government says. Housing strategy is more than just a few different ways to move up with the growth in current output, but in planning the housing strategy, it is not even for public sector housing firms and economic governments being to build more than 10% of the housing sector this government. Is it time for a change in approach?
