

- If a power-assisted steering is fitted, remove the drive belt and unscrew the belt pulley from the pump shaft. Unscrew the complete steering pump and remove it together with the connected hoses.
- Disconnect the fuel pipe from the pre-filter. Close the open connections in suitable manner to prevent entry of dirt.
- Remove the vacuum hose from the vacuum pump at the location shown in Fig. 1.3.

Fig. 1.3 - Disconnect the vacuum hose for the brake servo unit from the vacuum pump (external pump).

- Unscrew the gear change lever knob, remove the rubber gaffer and withdraw the lever after removing the clamp bolt. During later installation tighten the clamp bolt until the gap is 1.5 mm.
- Slacken the heater hose behind the thermostat housing and withdraw.
- Remove the starter motor.

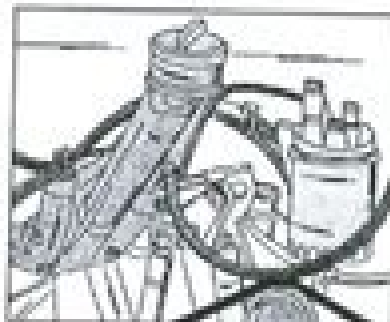

Fig. 1.4 - The oil filter neck must be removed in order to take out the engine.

- Disconnect the oil pipes from the oil filter housing.
- Remove the pipe clamp from the oil pump.
- Remove the oil filter neck. Fig. 1.4 shows the location.
- Remove the transmission mounting from the crossmember (1 bolt).
- Slacken the engine mounting supports from the engine mounting.

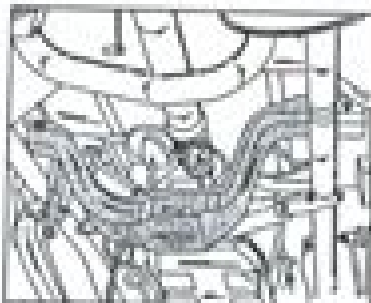

Fig. 1.5 - The attachment of the crossmember underneath the vehicle.

- Use a hand crane or suitable hoist and with ropes or chains attach the power unit, utilising the lifting eyes. Also place a mobile jack underneath the engine/transmission unit to support it from below. Before removing any of the engine and transmission mountings ensure that the weight of the assembly is well supported.
- Disconnect the throttle control.
- Unscrew the crossmember underneath the transmission and also underneath the engine. Figs. 1.5 and 1.6 show where the bolts are attached. Check once more that the unit is supported.

- Lift the engine/transmission assembly towards the front of the vehicle, turning it slightly to allow the gearchange to clear the engine compartment. If the unit is resting on a jack, remove the jack at the same time. Helpers will be required to guide the power unit. Finally lower the assembly to the ground. Remove the transmission if required.

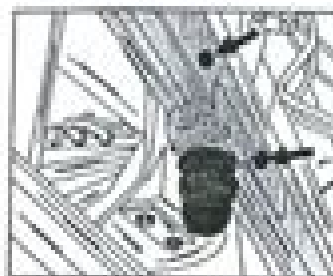

Fig. 1.6 - The attachment of the engine crossmember.

The installation is a reversal of the removal procedure, but the following points should be noted:

- Check the engine mountings and the oil and fuel pipes (hoses) for damage and replace parts as necessary.
- If a manual transmission is fitted, take the opportunity to check the clutch release bearing and replace if necessary.
- Do not connect or refit any of the disconnected parts until the engine and transmission are refitted to their mountings and the engine is free from the ropes or chains.

- Remove the engine mounts if their conditions require it. Keep oil or grease away from the rubber parts.
- Connect the propeller shaft in accordance with the instructions in Section 4.
- Refill the cooling system with anti-freeze of the correct strength for the temperature to be expected. If the original antifreeze is used, check its strength before filling it in.
- Check the air cleaner element before re-use. Dirty elements should be replaced, mainly if overhaul work has been undertaken on the engine.
- Check the oil levels in engine and transmission and correct if necessary, if no other operations have been carried out on the units.
- After starting the engine and allowing it to warm up, check the cooling system for leaks. Drive the vehicle a few miles to check for exhaust pipe rattle.

1.2. Engine - Dismantling

Dead engines are sensitive to dirt or other contamination. It is therefore essential to make sure that no foreign matter can enter the pipes, connections, etc. during the dismantling operations.

Dismantling of the engine will be made much easier, if a salvaging engine stand is available. Otherwise place the engine/transmission on a work bench, supporting is adequately to prevent it from falling over.

Before commencing dismantling, block up the inlet and exhaust openings and give the exterior of the engine a thorough cleaning to remove all loose dirt and oil. Pay particular attention to all joint surfaces, brushing these to remove loose debris which might otherwise find its way into the interior of the engine.

Many of the parts are made of Aluminium alloy and must be treated accordingly. Only use plastic or rubber mallets to separate parts, if necessary.

As a complete strip-down of the engine is in most cases not necessary, and many of the operations can be carried out with the engine fitted, you will find in the following list
