

ENDOCRINE SYSTEM

Endocrine System: WORKING TOGETHER

Each organ system works on other systems within the body to do its "job". Our bodies learn just some of the ways that the endocrine system interacts with other organ systems.

Nervous System

Circulatory System

Endocrine System: FACTS

Endocrine System: PROBLEMS

Most of the time, the endocrine system works perfectly well. However, sometimes problems can arise.

Diabetes

Diabetes is a condition that causes high blood glucose (sugar) levels. It is caused by the body being unable to either produce or use the hormone insulin. So, the glucose in blood sugar gets stuck in the blood. Symptoms include increased thirst, weight gain, changes in vision, increased weight changes, persistent acne, numbness or tingling in the hands.

Endocrine System: KEY TERMS

Term	Definition
Endocrine System	Network of endocrine glands that make, store, and release hormones.
Hormones	Chemical messengers that carry information and instructions from one cell to another.

Endocrine System: HORMONES

Hormones are chemical signals. Hormones are released into the bloodstream by endocrine glands. They travel through the bloodstream and bind to target cells, which then respond to the signal. Hormones can affect many different parts of the body, such as growth, metabolism, and reproduction.

Endocrine System: FIGHT-OR-FLIGHT

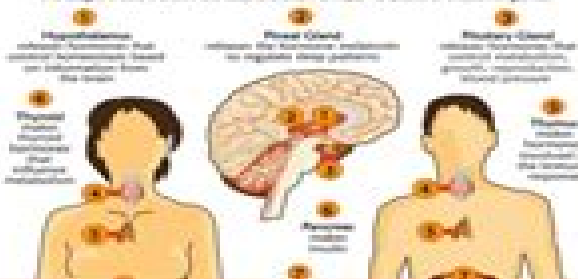

The fight-or-flight response is a reaction that occurs in the body when we are really frightened. The body's fight-or-flight response is the body's way of reacting to a dangerous situation. When we feel scared, our body releases hormones that help us react quickly. These hormones increase our heart rate, blood pressure, and breathing rate. They also make us feel alert and ready to act. The fight-or-flight response is a natural reaction that helps us survive in dangerous situations.

When we are not frightened, our body releases hormones that help us relax. These hormones decrease our heart rate, blood pressure, and breathing rate. They also make us feel calm and relaxed. The fight-or-flight response is a natural reaction that helps us survive in dangerous situations.

Endocrine System: GLANDS

A gland is a structure that produces and releases substances that perform a specific function in the body. There are many different types of glands in the body. Some glands release hormones, while others release enzymes or other substances. The endocrine system is made up of glands that release hormones. These hormones travel through the bloodstream and bind to target cells, which then respond to the signal. The endocrine system is a complex system that helps regulate many different functions in the body.

Endocrine System: FEEDBACK LOOPS

Feedback loops are a way for the body to regulate itself. They are a series of steps that help the body maintain balance. There are two main types of feedback loops: negative feedback loops and positive feedback loops. Negative feedback loops are the most common type of feedback loop. They help the body return to a normal state after a disturbance. Positive feedback loops are less common. They help the body amplify a response to a stimulus.

One example of a negative feedback loop is the regulation of blood sugar levels. When blood sugar levels are low, the pancreas releases the hormone insulin. Insulin helps cells take up glucose from the blood, which lowers blood sugar levels. When blood sugar levels are high, the pancreas releases the hormone glucagon. Glucagon helps the liver release glucose into the blood, which raises blood sugar levels. This is a negative feedback loop because the hormone released by the pancreas opposes the effect of the stimulus.

Another example of a negative feedback loop is the regulation of body temperature. When body temperature is low, the body shivers to generate heat. When body temperature is high, the body sweats to cool down. This is a negative feedback loop because the response opposes the effect of the stimulus.
