Medical Nonsense to Tickle Your Funnybone

The human arm and hand are composed of bones, muscles, and nerves. The bones are the framework of the arm and hand, and the muscles are the organs of movement. The nerves are the organs of sensation and control. The arm and hand are the most important parts of the human body, and they are the most vulnerable. They are the parts of the body that are most often injured, and they are the parts of the body that are most often the cause of disability. The arm and hand are the parts of the body that are most often the cause of pain, and they are the parts of the body that are most often the cause of suffering. The arm and hand are the parts of the body that are most often the cause of death, and they are the parts of the body that are most often the cause of despair. The arm and hand are the parts of the body that are most often the cause of hope, and they are the parts of the body that are most often the cause of joy. The arm and hand are the parts of the body that are most often the cause of love, and they are the parts of the body that are most often the cause of life.
