

This first official publication of White Man, Yellow Man in English presents the first major work by Shusaku Endo, one of Japan's most celebrated writers.

These two novellas set during World War II—one in France and the other in Japan—introduce some of the major themes that would come to define Endo's work. "White Man," set in Nazi occupied Lyon, brings the reader into the mind of a young man who volunteers as an interpreter for the Gestapo. The story is told through this collaborator's diary, in which he bluntly ponders what he sees as the innate cruelty of human beings while also contemplating the Christian desire for redemption.

"Yellow Man" tells the story of a Japanese man who, though brought up a Christian, confronts his own moral failings. Exhausted by the war and dying from tuberculosis, he realizes the superficiality of his faith in an alien "white" God. Intertwined with his story is that of Durant, a disgraced French missionary whose relationship to God is anything but superficial. The Japanese student Chiba and the priest argue that the Japanese do not—indeed cannot—think in Christian categories of sin and guilt.

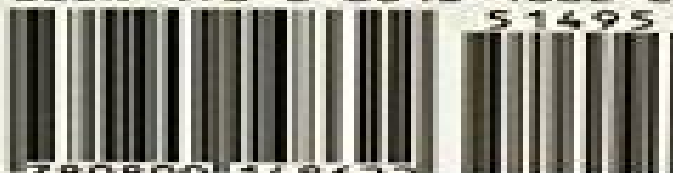

This question of whether Japanese and Christian sensibilities are ultimately irreconcilable was an ongoing theme for Endo. Likewise, as he would continue to do in later works, Endo thoughtfully, forcefully explores religious concepts such as sin, redemption, and resurrection.

SHUSAKU ENDO (1923–1996) was born in Tokyo and was raised by his mother and an aunt in Kobe, where he converted to Roman Catholicism at the age of twelve. He studied French literature at Keio University and after graduation continued these studies at the University of Lyon in the early 1950s. Endo received several awards for his work, including the Akutagawa Prize, Mainichi Cultural Prize, Shincho Prize, and Tanizaki Prize. He is also the author of Silence and Deep River.
