Crum,F.G.J. Derkinderen,2012-12-06 The business environment particularly after the continuing oil crises of the seventies can be characterized as evolving rapidly in complex and often unpredictable ways Such things as high interest and inflation rates fluctuating exchange rates volatile commodity markets and increasing political turmoil have led to a situation in which explicit consideration of environmental dynamics is becoming much more important for successful business planning than was true in the past Companies are finding that it is no longer possible to conduct business as usual under these changing circumstances Rather decision makers are having to be more cognizant of the many sources of uncertainty that could have serious impacts on the continued prosperity of the firm as well as of actions that can be taken so that the company can thrive in spite of these greater uncertainties Businesses have responded to these challenges by giving more thorough consideration to strategic issues Whereas in the past the steady progression of markets and technology was taken for granted the uncertainties associated with increased worldwide competition as well as with other exogenous factors have forced companies to think more about flexibility This involves not only how best to exploit profitable current options but also how to position themselves at present to be able to respond appropriately to threats and opportunities as they arise in the future Unfortunately in this redirection of outlook the finance profession has not kept pace
