LAB EXERCISE 5: Lizard Evolution Virtual Lab

Answer the following questions as you finish each module in the virtual lab.

MODULE 1: Introduction

1. In the introduction of the virtual lab, you must select to start with lizards from a population. What do you think that genetic drift will cause to change (over time)?

Random genetic drift will cause changes in allele frequencies over time.

2. Did you notice your selected lizard's wings?

Initially, yes, the wings were there, although they were very small. As the population evolved, the wings disappeared, and the lizards became flightless. This is an example of directional selection.

3. An adaptation is a structure or function that the organism has as a population because it increases the ability to survive and reproduce in a particular environment. Provide one example and an explanation of an adaptation in the lizard lab.

One example of an adaptation is the loss of wings. In the virtual lab, the lizards that were selected for were the ones that were flightless. This is an example of directional selection.

4. Provide one evolutionary explanation for why diversifying or disruptive selection (i.e., the graph) would favor stabilizing or directional selection.

Stabilizing selection would favor the average phenotype, while disruptive selection would favor the extreme phenotypes.
