Competition P.A. Keddy, 2012-12-06 Competition is one of the most important factors controlling the distribution and abundance of living creatures Sperm cells racing up reproductive tracts beetle larvae battling inside single seeds birds defending territories and trees interfering with the light available to neighbours are all engaged in competition for limited resources Along with predation and mutualism competition is one of the three major biological forces that assemble living communities Recent experimental work much of it only from the last few decades has enhanced human knowledge of the prevalence of competition in nature There are acacia trees that use ants to damage vines beetles that compete in arenas for access to dung balls tadpoles that apparently poison their neighbours birds that smash the eggs of potential competitors and plants that associate with fungi in order to increase access to soil resources While intended as an up to date reference work on the state of this branch of ecology the many non technical examples will make interesting reading for those with a general interest in nature Greatly expanded from the first prize winning edition there are entirely new chapters including one on resources and another on competition gradients in nature The author freely ranges across all major taxonomic groups in search of evidence The question of whether competition occurs is no longer useful the author maintains rather the challenge is to determine when and where each kind of competition is important in natural systems For this reason variants of competition such as intensity asymmetry and hierarchies are singled out for particular attention The book concludes with the difficulties of finding general principles in complex ecological communities and illustrates the limitations on knowledge that arise out of the biased conduct of scientists themselves Competition can be found elsewhere in living systems other than ecological communities at sub microscopic scales in the interactions of enzymes and neural pathways and over large geographic areas in the spread of human populations and contrasting ideas about the world Human societies are therefore also examined for evidence of the kinds of competition found among other living organisms Using an array of historical examples including Biblical conflicts the use of noblemen s sons in the Crusades the Viking raids in Europe strategic bombing campaigns in the Second World War and ethnic battles of the Balkans the book illustrates how most of the aspects of competition illustrated with plants and animals can be extended to the interactions of human beings and their societies

Chemical Pedagogy Keith S Taber,2024-12-20 How should chemistry be taught in schools colleges and universities Chemical Pedagogy discusses teaching approaches and techniques the reasoning behind them and the evidence for their effectiveness The book surveys a wide range of different pedagogic strategies and tactics that have been recommended to better engage learners and provide more effective chemistry teaching These accounts are supported by an initial introduction to some key ideas and debates about pedagogy the science of teaching Chemical Pedagogy discusses how teaching innovations can be tested to inform research based practice Through this book the author explores the challenges of carrying out valid experimental studies in education and the impediments to generalising study results to diverse teaching and learning contexts As a result the author highlights both the need to read published studies critically and the value of teachers and lecturers testing out recommended innovations in their own classrooms Chemical Pedagogy introduces core principles from research into human cognition and learning to provide a theoretical perspective on how to best teach for engagement and understanding An examination of some of the more contentious debates about pedagogy leads to the advice to seek optimally guided instruction which balances the challenge offered to learners with the level of support provided This provides a framework for discussing a wide range of teaching approaches and techniques that have been recommended to those teaching chemistry across educational levels including both those intended to replace teaching from the front and others that can be built into traditional lecture courses to enhance the learning experience
