ESSAY QUESTIONS (20 POINTS EACH) (TRY TO KEEP EACH ANSWER TO 250 WORDS OR LESS)

1. What are the advantages and disadvantages of logrolling? How can logrolling for two pure public goods under majority rule prevent the attainment of efficient outcomes? Can you give an example where logrolling improves efficiency?

Legislators who hold the majority affect bills that will pass through congress. The party that holds the minority must go through the majority party legislators. While there is no sheer benefit for the minority party, the bill they would propose will not face harsh opposition. The disadvantages affect the country's economic and legislative structures, leading to consequences of social economics or a government breakdown, encouraging disruptive politics and an over-bloated government if left unchecked. With the expensive venture for the party's bill, the minority cannot appeal to the majority giving them financial motivation and getting their support. Often, it is known as pork-barrel legislation, which can cause implicit logrolling. Under two issues, it cannot be approved if voted on but separately it will pass. This is an outlet to express intense emotions on an issue in a one-person, one-vote democracy. The losses of logrolling can be efficient and can lead to voluntary trade which increases efficiency and stable equilibrium. This can lead to unwanted/wanted support for the minority and vice versa.

2. How would you set up a cost-benefit analysis of a program to reduce air pollution in a city? Carefully indicate the items you would include as benefits and costs, and discuss the problems encountered in measuring these benefits and costs.

I would set up a cost-benefit analysis program to reduce air pollution by identifying the effects of air pollution; on health, productivity, and amenity. The cost would consist of financial cost implementation, inconvenience for local commuters, effects on trade and commerce, adequate infrastructure, advertisement plan, and coordination among all public and private departments. A list of benefits would include a reduction in air pollution, saving using public transport and shared means of transport, and a reduction in city traffic. The problems that someone would encounter vary. For example, someone might aggregate environmental and social impact, monetization, measuring the benefits, and specifically probabilistic risk.

3. How do government bureaus differ from private firms? Why is there good reason to believe that bureaucrats will seek to supply more than the efficient level of their output in any year? Use a graphic analysis to show the losses in efficiency that will result if a government bureau succeeds in maximizing its annual expenditures.

Connections between financial and social effects of implementing programs, as well as the work made to support it. The measure of the quality of an outcome is determined by the proportion between that outcome and desired outcomes. Government expenditure shrinking will create an inactive monetary action as the public authority is buying less labor and products for a confidential sector. This creates an increase in income charge, which flattens the financial actions decreasing people's discretionary cash flow. This would cause their expenditures to be lower on goods and services and decrease people's products. The bureaucracy would be deeply worried, and this criticism of clients ventured to impress them and lay out client dependability. This creates failure in the public sector as assets do not effectively satisfy consumers. Bureaucrats are more successful in pertaining to confidential matters, which drives their benefits. Considering individuals on their gifts and execution since their efficiency is valuable. Public areas are concerned with the overall government assistance and execution. Making it easier to hire and recruit people regardless of if their presentations fall short of required efficiency standards.
