Swing trading is a type of trading that involves holding a position for a period of time, typically from a few days to several weeks. Swing traders primarily use technical analysis to identify price patterns and trends. They aim to capture the "meat" of a price move, entering a trade when the price is at a local minimum and exiting when it reaches a local maximum. Swing trading is a full-time profession that requires a significant amount of time and effort. It is not a get-rich-quick scheme, but rather a disciplined approach to trading that can be profitable over the long term. Swing traders must have a strong understanding of market structure and price action. They must also have a solid risk management plan in place to protect their capital. Swing trading is a challenging but rewarding pursuit for those who are willing to put in the time and effort to learn the craft.
