CHAPTER 1 PERSPECTIVES ON LEARNING

Multiple Choice Questions

Human beings undoubtedly learn more during the course of a lifetime than any other species on earth. The major result of this capacity to learn is that:

- New instincts begin to emerge.
- Human thought becomes less logical with each generation.
- Humans can benefit from their experiences.
- Humans are the only species whose behavior cannot be analyzed in terms of stimuli and responses.

Three of the following are examples of learning. Which one is not?

- Abigail cries when she steps on a sharp pebble.
- After many hours of heated debate, Brian begins to advocate political practices he has previously opposed.
- Cara suddenly recognizes how the division fact " $24 \div 4 = 6$ " is related to the multiplication fact " $6 \times 4 = 24$."
- David has been running away from German shepherds ever since he was bitten by a German shepherd two years ago.

Reynelda has trouble tracing a complex shape with a pencil when she is in kindergarten, but she can do it quite well by the time she is in second grade. Is this an instance of learning?

- Yes, because her behavior has changed.
- No, because the circumstances are too dissimilar.
- Maybe, although the change may simply be due to physiological maturation.
- Maybe, but only if she is being reinforced for tracing accurately.

Human Learning Ormrod Study Guide:

Human Learning Jeanne Ellis Ormrod, 2008 Human Learning fifth edition is the leading text on learning theories applied to education. It covers a broad range of learning theories including behaviorist, social cognitive, cognitive, and developmental. Complex learning and cognition including metacognition, transfer, and social processes in knowledge construction are also covered, as is motivation. Coverage demonstrates through the author's extremely lucid and engaging prose how different concepts relate to one another. The book provides dozens of proven examples and emphasizes meaningful learning that makes the fundamentals of these theories comprehensible to students with little or no prior coursework in psychology. Key revisions to this book include a thoroughly updated section on behaviorism, a new separate chapter on the developmental theories of Piaget and Vygotsky, and a reorganized motivation section. Human Learning Ormrod, Cram101 Textbook Reviews, 2006-05-25.
