Java Coding Best Practices

01

Using Naming Standards

Use appropriate names for variables, constants, methods, classes, interface, etc, that are easy to understand

02

Class Members in Scope Order

Sort each member according to the access modifiers: private, default (package), protected, and public.

03

Class Members Should Be Private

It is recommended to make class members private to bring out the usefulness of encapsulating information

04

Using Underscores in Numeric Literals

Using underscores in numeric literals make codes easier to read

05

Avoid Redundant Initialization

No need to initialize member variables with values like null, false, and 0 as they are the member variables' default initialization values
