

Neisser and Harsch (1992)

- University students interviewed after the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger about where they were and what they were doing
- When asked 3 year later
 - 33% were completely wrong
 - 0% were completely accurate
- Almost everyone thought their recollection of the event was perfectly accurate
 - We are actually just retelling ourselves a story when we remember the event

Problems with Eyewitness Testimony

75% of all wrongful convictions are due to inaccurate eyewitness testimony

1 The Other Race Effect

Eyewitnesses can make errors in assigning guilt for crimes and distinguishing members of another ethnic group.

2 Misleading Post-Event Information

Questions after witnessing an event can distort memory

3 Source Monitoring Errors

People may attribute their memory for some objects or events to the wrong source

- This is what occurs when eyewitnesses identify an innocent person as the perpetrator who committed the crime
 - A person's face is seen as familiar and attribute a memory to that person, though they can have nothing to do with the event/crime
 - A woman was raped and identified a man on a live tv program as her assailant. She had been watching as her assailant. He was discussing rape on the tv at the time. Nearly convicted but was able to use the appearance as his alibi

The Effect of Post Event Information

Loftus and Palmer (1974)

- People were presented with a film depicting a car accident. Later 1 group was asked 'how fast was the car going when they contacted each other'
 - On average they said 51.2 km/h
- A different group was asked 'how fast were the cars going when they smashed into each other'
 - On average they said 65.7 km/h
- One week later, the 'smashed' group estimated the cars were going faster than the 'contacted' group
 - Complete recall of broken glass in the car crash
 - 10% of the 'smashed' group reported broken glass
 - There was no broken glass in the car crash
 - This is a part of the accident scene

Construction of False Memories

- Since real events are not like real life, it is possible for people to remember events that never actually happened
- This can be the result of imagining an event and replaying it as a memory
