

Differentiating Financial and Managerial Accounting

✓ Exclusively available on IvyPanda

Accounting is classified into two main types; financial accounting and managerial accounting. Financial accounting refers to the generation of periodic reports in conformance to the requirements of shareholder statute and other external bodies like government agencies.

Managerial accounting refers to the identification, processing and communication of information needed for managerial planning, evaluation and control in an organization. Thus, the major difference between the two is that financial accounting is meant for use by external parties like creditors, shareholders, etc. while managerial accounting is meant for use within the organization by managers.

This basic difference leads to a number of other notable differences between management and financial accounting despite the fact that both use the same financial data. In addition to the people targeted by the accounting reports, the two also in the final data presented to users, addressing of the future or the past etc. Let us have a closer look at these differences ("Financial and Management Accounting", 2008, p. 1).

Basic differences

The differences between managerial and financial accounting include the stated fact that management accounting prepares reports for use within the organization by employees and managers while financial reports are generated for use by parties who are not a part of the organization i.e. external parties. These include government agencies, shareholders, banks, creditors etc (Geoffrey, 2009, p. 1). Another difference is evident in the objectives of the two types of accounting.

While managerial accounting is aimed at providing information for decision making e.g. cost information, cash flows, budgets, etc., financial accounting is aimed at recording organizational performance over a specific period of time, preparing financial statements for this period and stating the position of the organization at the end of the specified period.
