Air Force Manual United States. Department of the Air Force, 1973 Federal Register , 2012-08 Aviation Automation Charles E. Billings, 2018-01-29 The advent of very compact very powerful digital computers has made it possible to automate a great many processes that formerly required large complex machinery Digital computers have made possible revolutionary changes in industry commerce and transportation This book an expansion and revision of the author's earlier technical papers on this subject describes the development of automation in aircraft and in the aviation system its likely evolution in the future and the effects that these technologies have had and will have on the human operators and managers of the system It suggests concepts that may be able to enhance human machine relationships in future systems The author focuses on the ability of human operators to work cooperatively with the constellation of machines they command and control because it is the interactions among these system elements that result in the system's success or failure whether in aviation or elsewhere Aviation automation has provided great social and technological benefits but these benefits have not come without cost In recent years new problems in aircraft have emerged due to failures in the human machine relationship These incidents and accidents have motivated this inquiry into aviation automation Similar problems in the air traffic management system are predicted as it becomes more fully automated In particular incidents and accidents have occurred which suggest that the principle problems with today's aviation automation are associated with its complexity coupling autonomy and opacity These problems are not unique to aviation they exist in other highly dynamic domains as well The author suggests that a different approach to automation called human centered automation offers potential benefits for system performance by enabling a more cooperative human machine relationship in the control and management of aircraft and air traffic

Human-centered Aircraft Automation: A Concept and Guidelines Charles E. Billings, 1991 Audit and Control of Systems Software Ian J. Douglas, 1983 Human Performance in Automated and Autonomous Systems Mustapha Mouloua, Peter A. Hancock, 2019-09-19

This book examines recent advances in theories models and methods relevant to automated and autonomous systems The following chapters provide perspectives on modern autonomous systems such as self driving cars and unmanned aerial systems directly from the professionals working with and studying them Current theories surrounding topics such as vigilance trust and fatigue are examined throughout as predictors of human performance in the operation of automated systems The challenges related to attention and effort in autonomous vehicles described within give credence to still developing methods of training and selecting operators of such unmanned systems The book further recognizes the need for human centered approaches to design a carefully crafted automated technology that places the human user in the center of that design process

Features
Combines scientific theories with real world applications where automated technologies are implemented Disseminates new understanding as to how automation is now transitioning to autonomy Highlights the role of individual and team characteristics in the piloting of unmanned systems and how models of human performance are applied in system design Discusses methods for selecting and training individuals to succeed in an age of increasingly complex human machine systems Provides explicit benchmark comparisons of progress across the last few decades and identifies future prognostications and the constraints that impinge upon these lines of progress

Human Performance in Automated and Autonomous Systems Current Theory and Methods illustrates the modern scientific theories and methods to be applied in real world automated technologies
