

Human Blood Cell Typing

What divided never meets?

Objectives

After completing this activity, students should be able to: use the knowledge of the immune system to explain the importance of blood typing; understand the importance of blood typing in transfusions; understand the importance of blood typing in organ transplantation; understand the importance of blood typing in forensic science; understand the importance of blood typing in medical research.

Activity 1 – Red Blood Cells and Agglutination

	Person with Blood Type A	Person with Blood Type B	Person with Blood Type AB	Person with Blood Type O
Cells with attached antigens
Antibodies produced
Cells for the person's own blood agglutinate
Cells for the person's own blood do not agglutinate

- Identify the blood type of the person whose blood cells are agglutinated by the antibodies of the other blood type.
- Identify the blood type of the person whose blood cells are not agglutinated by the antibodies of the other blood type.
- Identify the blood type of the person whose blood cells are agglutinated by the antibodies of the other blood type.
- Identify the blood type of the person whose blood cells are not agglutinated by the antibodies of the other blood type.

Microglia in Health and Disease: A Unique Immune Cell Population Alessandro Michelucci,Michel Mittelbronn,Diego Gomez-Nicola,2018-10-05 Microglia are essential for the development and function of the adult brain

Their ontogeny together with the absence of turnover from the periphery and the singular environment of the central nervous system CNS make microglia a unique cell population compared to other tissue macrophages. The unique properties and functions of microglial cells such as their role in synaptic pruning or the exceptional capacity to scan the brain parenchyma and rapidly react to its perturbations have emerged in recent years. In the coming years, understanding how microglia acquire and maintain their unique profiles in order to fulfil distinct tasks in the healthy CNS and how these are altered in disease will be essential to develop strategies to diagnose or treat CNS disorders with an immunological component. This Research Topic covers several aspects of microglial biology ranging from their origin and the functional role of microglia during development and lifespan, their molecular properties compared with other brain and peripheral immune cells, to microglial phenotypes and functional states in neurodegenerative diseases and brain tumours. In conclusion, the present Research Topic provides a comprehensive overview of our current understanding of several cellular and molecular mechanisms that make microglia a unique immune cell population within the healthy CNS as well as under inflammatory, neurodegenerative and tumorigenic processes.
