Proof Technology in Mathematics Research and Teaching Gila Hanna, David A. Reid, Michael de Villiers, 2019-10-02
This book presents chapters exploring the most recent developments in the role of technology in proving. The full range of topics related to this theme are explored including computer proving, digital collaboration among mathematicians, mathematics teaching in schools and universities and the use of the internet as a site of proof learning. Proving is sometimes thought to be the aspect of mathematical activity most resistant to the influence of technological change. While computational methods are well known to have a huge importance in applied mathematics, there is a perception that mathematicians seeking to derive new mathematical results are unaffected by the digital era. The reality is quite different. Digital technologies have transformed how mathematicians work together, how proof is taught in schools and universities and even the nature of proof itself. Checking billions of cases in extremely large but finite sets, impossible a few decades ago, has now become a standard method of proof. Distributed proving by teams of mathematicians working independently on sections of a problem has become very much easier as digital communication facilitates the sharing and comparison of results. Proof assistants and dynamic proof environments have influenced the verification or refutation of conjectures and ultimately how and why proof is taught in schools. And techniques from computer science for checking the validity of programs are being used to verify mathematical proofs. Chapters in this book include not only research reports and case studies but also theoretical essays, reviews of the state of the art in selected areas and historical studies. The authors are experts in the field.

educational trends Iris Eireannach an Oideachais ,1967 The Mathematical Gazette ,1945 The administration of examinations for 15-19 year olds in England Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Education Committee,2012-07-03 This report from the Education Committee looks at the administration of examinations for 15 19 year olds in England The Committee expresses serious concerns about incentives in the exam system and about competition on syllabus content Incentives in the system should be changed so the downward pressure through the competition of exam boards is mitigated The Committee considers a number of options to change incentives including i A single board This offers a simpler system with no risk of competition but the Committee believes the cost risk and disruption outweigh the benefits ii Franchising of subjects to exam boards This removes syllabus competition but again has downsides 3 Or the current system of multiple boards The Committee sees no benefit in competition on syllabus content but the setting and marking of exams and associated administration if properly regulated could generate incentives and drive quality up offering value for money to schools and colleges The Committee also recommends the development of national syllabuses accredited by Ofqual The syllabuses would be developed by exam boards in conjunction with learned bodies and employer organisations and could therefore retain the benefits of competition on quality and the incentive for exam boards to innovate
