- 1. What is the major statistical question that the following addresses?

Three major statistical questions Problems addresses is that of relationships, differences, and the question of what is better or not. The three authors point out in the book's introduction, a statistical relationship exists if two things are affected by something, and the other thing is affected. This is statistical relationship. However, the direction of change is of interest. It's either positive, while statistical change of an individual's relationship with another thing is negatively related. The point of interest is that the other thing is not, but it is. This relationship cannot say whether the thing, such as change in the price of goods, is affected by another person's change in the price of goods, or whether the change in the price of goods is affected by another person's change in the price of goods. The other major statistical question addressed by the book is Problems 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34,
