

The Circular Flow of Resources, Goods, Service and Money Payments

One way of describing the overall operation of the entire economy is through a circular flow diagram such as the one on this page. This diagram presents a highly simplified overview of the combined economic system.

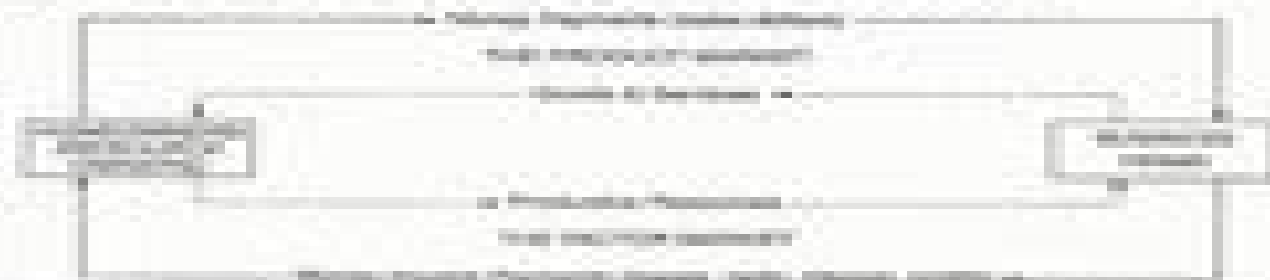

Businesses (firms) produce and distribute supply the products of their land, labor and capital. Business firms in exchange for money receive payments for the flows of wages and salaries, profits, interest and profits. Owners of the businesses provide their financial resources to purchase the finished goods and services supplied by the business firms. Business firms then use the proceeds from these sales to pay the business owners for the services the firms receive by supplying the resources. This is how the circular flow of resources, goods and services, and money flows payments is established and maintained.

Payments to the lower part of the diagram, which is sometimes called the factor market, represent income to the resource owners who sell productive resources. The flows from payments go out to only to the business firms that buy productive resources.

Payments payments to the upper part of the diagram reflect payments for product market output as well as the resource owners sell their goods and services. For these same payments appear as income to the business firms that sell goods and services.

The important point to emphasize is that all of the money payments shown in the diagram are then received by an interconnected set of owners in a system of interconnected markets where prices appear in a price system to bring about price. For example, the price business owners are willing to pay for finished goods and services affects the price business firms receive for the use of their resources. The price of resources is then affected by business firms and willing to pay for the services the resource owners provide. The diagram shows that everything is interconnected in a system that business and the interaction between the market interactions flow flow.
