Factors That Impact Effective Discharge Of Senior Citizens From Hospital:

Ensuring the Effective Discharge of Older Patients from NHS Acute Hospitals Great Britain. National Audit Office,2003 In September 2002 8 9 per cent of older patients occupying NHS acute care beds had already been declared fit to leave hospital but had not yet done so for a variety of reasons This equates to more than 4 100 older patients on any given day although this is significantly lower than at the same point in 2001 The Government aims to end widespread delayed discharge by 2004 Data has only been collected centrally since 1997 but this data needs to be standardized further There are plans to introduce a Single Assessment Process to make assessment more efficient and more focused on the patient and patients and carers must be more closely involved with decision making

Integrated Care and Fall Prevention in Active and Healthy Aging

Eklund, Patrik, 2021-06-25 In today's world healthy aging and a fulfilling lifestyle are important to older members of society with many opting to remain as independent and mobile as possible for as long as possible. However, elderly individuals tend to have a variety of functional limitations that can increase the likelihood of debilitating falls and injuries. Assessments of functionality are very often only performed following an accident which implies a hindsight bias because results do not necessarily reflect pre-accidental performance capacities. Furthermore, these belated measures do little to reduce the likelihood of new falls. As such, it is imperative that personalized preventative approaches are taken to prevent falls. Integrated Care and Fall Prevention in Active and Healthy Aging contains state-of-the-art research and practices related to integrated care, fall prevention, and aging throughout areas ranging from medical to social aspects of care, health, economy, standards, pathways, and information, scopes, practices, and guidelines, technology, etc. Covering topics such as active care and healthy aging, it is ideal for doctors, gerontologists, nursing home and long care facility staff, scientists, researchers, students, academicians, and practitioners working in care pathways involving good practices of fall prevention in home care and community care settings. The National Eldercare Systems Project, 1990. Principles and Practice of Geriatric Surgery Ronnie Ann Rosenthal, Michael E. Zenilman, Mark R. Katlic, 2011-07-12 In the preface to this impressive and well-produced book, the editors state that their aim is not to describe a new surgical specialty since most surgeons will soon need to be geriatric surgeons but to assemble a comprehensive account that will allow all providers of healthcare to the elderly to understand the issues involved in choosing surgery as a treatment option for their patients. This is a useful book that deserves to do well. I hope that the editors and their publisher will have the stamina to make this the first of several editions as it is clear that updated information about surgery in the elderly will be required to keep pace with this important field. considerable cultural change on the part of both service providers and their clients and this timely study explores the extent to which such a cultural change is actually taking place in British society The utilization of welfare services by a sample of people aged 70 and above on discharge from inpatient care and in a short period afterwards is examined as a critical testbed for key components of consumerism including participation representation access choice information and redress The book explores not only the extent to which opportunities are being provided for users to play an active role in their care but also their degree of willingness to assume such a role By investigating the experiences of clients from a generation which might be considered relatively resistant to a more active participation in health and social care the study offers an important insight into the extent to which a real social transformation is indeed taking place in the British welfare services
