By 1990, the average life expectancy at birth in the United States had increased to 75 years, a 10-year increase from 1960. A significant factor in this increase was the reduction in deaths from heart disease, which had been the leading cause of death in 1960. By 1990, heart disease had become the second leading cause of death, and cancer had become the leading cause of death.
