These data demonstrate a strong, but non-linear, relationship between the amount of time spent in the water and the amount of time spent on land. The relationship is non-linear because the amount of time spent in the water increases at a faster rate than the amount of time spent on land. This is likely due to the fact that the amount of time spent in the water is limited by the amount of time spent on land. For example, if a person spends 10 minutes on land, they can only spend 10 minutes in the water. However, if a person spends 20 minutes on land, they can spend 20 minutes in the water. This is why the relationship is non-linear.

The hand is positioned in the upper left corner of the frame, with the fingers gripping the object. The background is a light, neutral color, providing a clear contrast to the dark object. The overall composition is simple and focused on the object being held.
