The Malay language is spoken as a mother tongue by a portion of the population in three more nations in addition to its four official usages in Malaysia, Brunei, Indonesia, and Singapore.

Standard Malay is the de facto national language of Malaysia. Bahasa Melayu, sometimes called Bahasa Malaysia, is the national language of Malaysia. Bahasa, which literally translates to "language" in English, is a Malay word. Malay is recognized as the country's national and official language under the country's federal constitution. However, English is preferred over Malay in international trade and business by both the Chinese and Indians.
