2. Click the `Field Name/Column Name` property box in the lower `FIELD NAME/PROPERTY` pane.
3. Enter an expression (e.g., the function `Pat("text")`, `tbl1 & " & tbl2"`, `"tbl1" & tbl2`) inside the `Field Name/Column Name` property box.
4. Enter a tab name, change the `Field Name/Column Name` property to `tbl1` (instead of `tbl2`), and click `OK`.
5. Set the `REQUIRED` property to `YES` for calculating along fields, and a record will not be saved unless data is entered.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 20 men, aged 40-50 years, who were sedentary and had no history of cardiovascular disease. They were randomly assigned to either a control group or a training group. The training group participated in a 12-week program of aerobic exercise, three times per week, for 45 minutes per session. The control group did not participate in any exercise program. Physical fitness was measured at baseline and at 12 weeks using a variety of tests, including a maximal aerobic power test, a submaximal aerobic power test, and a resting heart rate test. Health was measured at baseline and at 12 weeks using a variety of tests, including a blood pressure test, a cholesterol test, and a glucose test. The results of the study showed that the training group had significantly higher physical fitness and better health than the control group at 12 weeks. The training program was effective in improving physical fitness and health in sedentary middle-aged men.

- Tables are joined typically by combining the primary key field of the primary table to its foreign key, represented in the secondary table. This usually creates a one-to-many relationship, but other types are possible:
 - One-to-many - each primary table record is related to many secondary table records but vice versa, there is only one record in primary. For example, when a customer is related to multiple orders.
 - One-to-one - each primary table record is related to only one secondary table record and vice versa. This type is uncommon but may happen, for example, when a customer is related to a discount.
 - Many-to-many - each primary table record is related to many secondary table records and vice versa. There is not uniqueness there from an informational, or junction, table is always required to transform a single many-to-many into two one-to-many relationships. Order details could be used as a junction table, for example, to relate one order to many products, and one product to many orders.
- The primary table field must be set as a primary key in the Microsoft Access property sheet: `tbl_order.custid`.
- The secondary table field must match the data type of the primary table field.
- Create table relationships, REFRESH creating queries, forms, and reports.
- To help organize relationships, give primary and secondary table the same name.
- To show which relationship type is operating, look at both ends of a table connection:
 - The "one" side shows as "1" and the "many" side shows as "N".

The 2007-2014 Approved Publishing offers three levels of collection for your institution's collection:

- Enhance Replicated Integrity: Secondary table records, whether in a related primary table or called separately, and cannot be used in database operations. Enforcing referential integrity requires this step, not because it is mandatory, should be added if a related primary record does not get saved.
- Cascade Update Related Fields: Sets in the primary table field with automatically updates all related secondary entries.
- Cascade Delete Related Records: Deleting a primary table record will delete all related secondary records, ensuring data integrity, are not independently created. One-to-one relation with care.
