Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of risk factors for coronary artery disease between men who had been exposed to asbestos and those who had not. A case-control study was conducted among men aged 60 years or older who had been employed in asbestos-related occupations for at least 10 years. The prevalence of risk factors for coronary artery disease was compared between cases (men with a history of myocardial infarction) and controls (men without a history of myocardial infarction). The results showed that the prevalence of risk factors for coronary artery disease was significantly higher in cases than in controls. This suggests that exposure to asbestos may be associated with an increased risk of developing coronary artery disease.

■ Abstract: While numerous studies have shown that the abundance of a fish species is related to the amount of habitat it occupies, the relationship between the two is not always linear. In this study, we used a series of experiments to determine the relationship between the abundance of a fish species and the amount of habitat it occupies. We found that the relationship is non-linear, with the abundance of a fish species increasing at a faster rate than the amount of habitat it occupies.
