The following is a psychology class outline that has been designed to prepare students for proficient mastery of the International Baccalaureate Standard Level IB psychology requirements.

Aims for this course (from the International Baccalaureate Psychology Curriculum Guide)

1. Develop an understanding of the biological, cognitive and sociocultural factors affecting mental processes and behavior
2. Apply an understanding of the biological, cognitive and sociocultural factors affecting mental processes and behavior to at least one applied area of study
3. Understand diverse methods of inquiry
4. Understand the importance of ethical practice in psychological research in general and observe ethical practice in their own inquiries
5. Ensure that ethical practices are upheld in all psychological inquiry and discussion
6. Develop an awareness of how psychological research can be applied to address real-world problems and promote positive change

Psychology and the international dimension

IB psychology takes a holistic approach that fosters intercultural understanding and respect. In the core of the IB psychology course, the biological level of analysis demonstrates what all humans share, whereas the cognitive and sociocultural levels of analysis reveal the immense diversity of influences that produce human behavior and mental processes. Cultural diversity is explored and students are encouraged to develop empathy for the feelings, needs and lives of others within and outside their own culture. This empathy contributes to an international understanding.

IB Psychology HL Topics

Psychological Research and Experimentation

We will look at several different types of psychological research; some involving experimentation while others involve simple observation. Several examples will be provided in class as well as specific guidelines for making your research project a success.

The focus of this section will center around four very specific topics:

- a. Introduction to research methods – building from the general scientific method and building further with psychologically specific information
- b. The ethics of psychological experimentation and research – We will look at specific experimental subjects.
- c. Quantitative research methods – using specific results from experimentation to prove our hypotheses.
- d. Qualitative research methods – ways to use correlation to strengthen our arguments if experimentation is not possible.
- d. Analysis of Results – use of central tendency, standard deviation and validation.

TOK AREAS FOR DISCUSSION IN THIS UNIT:

- How does empirical data help substantiate theoretical science?
- What role do ethics play in scientific experimentation? How can the ways of knowing affect those ethical considerations?

Biological Psychology

Biological psychology, with the advent of medicinal treatments for disorders, has gone to the forefront of psychological studies in the current media. In this section of the course, students will analyze the different sections of the
