

Individual Decision-Making and Argument

Topic: Sociology | Words: 1649 | Pages: 4

Complex processes, structures, and environmental interactions characterize contemporary institutions and organizations. One challenge economists, analysts, and marketers face is understanding the decision-making process. Likewise, scholars have shown increased interest in understanding decision-making outcomes to make better theoretical predictions, develop effective strategies, and suggest better public policies (Jiménez & Brocos, 2021). Consider behavioral complexities of the business context, in which people are situated, are reflected in their decision-making and behavioral mechanisms. In this sense, individual decision compromises different selves in a complex context. For example, senior management often considers the company's needs, available resources, staff capabilities, and the company's vision, mission, and environment while making a corporate decision. The processes entailed in decision-making involve cognitive processes underlying arguments and choices.

The Naïve Scientist and Attribution Approach

Social cognition broadly describes how people process, encode and use information to make sense of others' behavior in social contexts. How a person organizes and uses social information is crucial in understanding personal and group processes, conformity, and social identity. Humans are rational and can solve complex problems using sophisticated logic to develop solutions and construct arguments (McAlaney & Benson, 2020). Therefore, people apply these principles in everyday activities and social

Individual Decision Making Process Paper:

Social influences on individual decision making processes Ferdinand Vieider, 2009 The main focus of this thesis is to combine the multiple findings from social psychology and apply them with an economic approach to decision making To this purpose we investigate accountability and its interaction with market mechanisms more specifically real incentives in experimental settings This PhD thesis is structured as follows Chapter 2 studies the effect of accountability on ambiguity aversion the preference for known over normatively equivalent unknown probabilities Chapter 3 follows up on the ambiguity aversion issue by studying preference reversals under ambiguity Chapter 4 examines the influence of accountability on risk attitude Chapter 5 is of a methodological nature We separate accountability and incentives and find several effects Accountability is found to reduce preference reversals between frames for which incentives have no effect Incentives on the other hand are found to reduce risk seeking for losses where accountability has no effect

Protection of Natural Persons with Regard to Automated Individual Decision-Making in the GDPR Aleksandra Drożdż, 2020-03-09 Increasingly algorithms regulate our lives Personal data is routinely processed on an unprecedented scale in both private and public sectors This shift from more subjective and less structured human decision making processes to automated ones has provoked numerous concerns with regard to the rights and freedoms of natural persons affected In particular those attached to profiling that can lead to discrimination influencing crucial opportunities of individuals such as the ability to obtain credit insurance education a job or even medical treatment To the extent that automated individual decision making is based on personal data in the European Union it is subject to the General Data Protection Regulation The author examines whether this legislative act affords sufficient protection of natural persons with regard to such processing identifying the loopholes that hinder or prevent its efficacy and the de lege lata rules and de lege ferenda postulates that could provide individuals with effective protection in relation to automated individual decision making She provides an in depth analysis of such aspects as the following the GDPR s background terminology and material and territorial scope of application key concerns regarding automated individual decision making specific and general provisions of the GDPR relevant to protection of natural persons with regard to automated individual decision making special and general rights of the data subject relevant to automated individual decision making provided for in the GDPR key limitations to algorithmic transparency how profiling can create special categories of personal data by inference from ordinary personal data and how the version of reality derived from personal data is often at least partially inaccurate To interpret the rules of the GDPR the analysis draws on the travaux préparatoires case law of the Court of Justice of the European Union and national courts that concerns the previous Data Protection Directive guidelines and opinions of the Article 29 Working Party and the European Data Protection Board various reports and recommendations and numerous academic writings In its consideration of some of the most controversial issues in the realm of personal data protection issues whose role in the information society will grow rapidly this book represents a major contribution to research and legal guidance at the confluence of law and new technologies concerning algorithmic accountability Policymakers regulators and lawyers active in the ongoing development of personal data protection law will become knowledgeable about interpretations and guidelines formulated by European data protection authorities as well as examples and best practices in the field Moreover practitioners will find the implementation of automated individual decision making systems in accordance with the GDPR greatly facilitated The analysis will assist data protection authorities and judicature in assessing such systems and interpreting the GDPR framework with regard to protection of natural persons in the years to come

Administrative Tribunals and Adjudication Peter Cane,2009-08-03 Among the many constitutional developments of the past century or so one of the most significant has been the creation and proliferation of institutions that perform functions similar to those performed by courts but which are considered to be and in some ways are different and distinct from courts as traditionally conceived In much of the common law world such institutions are called administrative tribunals Their main function is to adjudicate disputes between citizens and the state by reviewing decisions of government agencies a function also performed by courts in judicial review proceedings and appeals Although tribunals in aggregate adjudicate many more such disputes than courts tribunals and their role as dispensers of administrative justice receive relatively little scholarly attention This wide ranging book length treatment of the subject compares tribunals in three major jurisdictions Australia the UK and the US It analyses and offers an account of the concept of administrative adjudication and traces its historical development from the earliest periods of the common law to the twenty first century There are chapters dealing with the design of tribunals and tribunal systems and with what tribunals do what they are for and how they interact with their users The book ends with a discussion of the place of tribunals in the administrative justice system and speculation about possible future developments Administrative Tribunals and Adjudication fills a significant gap in the literature and will be of great value to public lawyers and others interested in government accountability
