

Background

When a chemical substance enters a living organism, it can cause adverse effects. The effects can be direct or indirect, depending on the route of exposure.

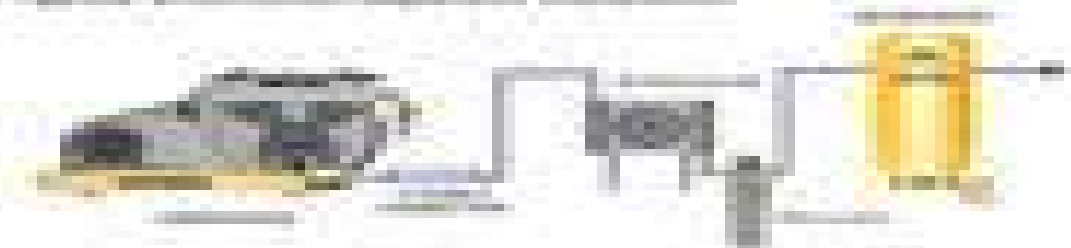

The effects can be acute or chronic, depending on the duration of exposure. Acute effects are those that occur shortly after exposure, while chronic effects are those that occur after a long period of exposure.

Exposure

Exposure is the process by which a chemical substance enters a living organism. It can occur through inhalation, ingestion, or absorption. The route of exposure can affect the severity of the effects.

The dose of the chemical substance is also an important factor. The dose is the amount of the substance that enters the organism. The higher the dose, the more severe the effects are likely to be.

Exposure/Response Relationship

Exposure	Dose	Toxicity	Response
Low	Low	Low	Low
Medium	Medium	Medium	Medium
High	High	High	High

Exposure/Response Relationship

The exposure/response relationship is a key concept in toxicology. It describes how the dose of a chemical substance affects the response of a living organism. The relationship can be linear or non-linear, depending on the substance and the organism.
