

A detailed oil painting of a young girl with voluminous, curly red hair and light green eyes. She is looking slightly to the right with a gentle expression. She wears a dark green dress with a wide, light-colored lace collar. In her left hand, she holds a small, vibrant bird with a reddish-orange head, a white throat, and green wings. The background is dark and moody, with some foliage visible on the right side. The overall style is soft and realistic, with fine brushwork and a focus on the girl's features and the bird's colors.

Purity Katherine Mullin, 2003-07-10 In James Joyce Sexuality and Social Purity Katherine Mullin offers a richly detailed account of Joyce's lifelong battle against censorship. Through prodigious archival research Mullin shows Joyce responding to Edwardian ideologies of social purity by accentuating the contentious or offensive elements in his work. The censorious ambitions of the social purity movement Mullin claims feed directly into Joyce's writing. Paradoxically his art becomes dependent on the very forces that seek to constrain and neutralize its revolutionary force. Acutely conscious of the dangers censorship presented to publication Mullin shows Joyce revenging himself by energetically ridiculing purity campaigns throughout his fiction. Ulysses, A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man and Dubliners all meticulously subvert purity discourse as Joyce pastiches both the vice crusaders themselves and the imperilled Young Persons they sought to protect. This important book will change the way Joyce is read and offers crucial insights into the sexual politics of Modernism.
