Abstract: In this essay I explore, reflect upon and theorize my experiences as a doctoral student writing a dissertation in the field of narrative studies. The inquiry concentrates on the problematic tensions that are unique to academic writing in qualitative disciplines, tensions with which I dealt and grappled extensively during my work. I wish to reflect, through the writing of a theoretically informed autoethnography, on the space inscribed between the proposal and the dissertation, and thus on the young scholar's initiation journey through a constructed, narrative-in-becoming space, and on the relationship between the backpackers' narratives of identity and change, which I researched, and my own. In doing so I will evocatively problematize the epitome of the academic rite-of-passage, i.e. the writing of a modern dissertation, in times of post-modern inquiry and writing.

The discussion is informed by the experience of travel and journey which took place between the interviewees' travel narratives and my own (in the form of a dissertation writing); between "field" and "office"; between positivist and interpretive paradigms; between proposal and dissertation, between paternal and maternal sources of writing, and between academic/scientific and poetic expression. The essay offers contributions to the inquiry into reflexivity and subjectivity within the growing paradigm of qualitative methodology, to the inquiry of rites-of-passage into communities and institutions, and it problematizes the possibility that narrative can contain and convey the post-modern, overwhelmed and fractured self.

Gender and Climate Change Joane Nagel, 2025-08-05 Does gender matter in global climate change This timely and provocative book takes readers on a guided tour of basic climate science then holds up a gender lens to find out what has been overlooked in popular discussion research and policy debates We see that around the world more women than men die in climate related natural disasters the history of science and war are intimately interwoven masculine occupations and preoccupations and conservative men and their interests drive the climate change denial machine We also see that climate policymakers who embrace big science approaches and solutions to climate change are predominantly male with an ideology of perpetual economic growth and an agenda that marginalizes the interests of women and developing economies The book uses vivid case studies to highlight the often surprising gendered impacts of climate changes This new edition is a thorough update that includes revised and new chapters and new material that takes account of the significant advances in climate research environmental and social theory and the many political and social challenges posed in the wake of US elections Covid 19 pandemic and rapidly changing climate and environment The new edition also takes account of important social and cultural movements that resist challenges to women s rights and advocate for gender sexuality and racial justice This book will appeal to students researchers and academicians interested in environmental studies and gender studies It also will be of interest to policymakers activists and others involved with environmental policy and governance

Crossing the Yard Richard Shelton,2016-10-01 Ever since he was asked to critique the poetry of a convicted murderer he has lived in two worlds Richard Shelton was a young English professor in 1970 when a convict named Charles Schmid a serial killer dubbed the Pied Piper of Tucson in national magazines shared his brooding verse But for Shelton the novelty of meeting a death row monster became a thirty year commitment to helping prisoners express themselves Shelton began organizing creative writing workshops behind bars and in this gritty memoir he offers up a chronicle of reaching out to forgotten men and women and of creativity blossoming in a repressive environment He tells of published students such as Paul Ashley Greg Forker Ken Lamberton and Jimmy Santiago Baca who have made names for themselves through their writing instead of their crimes Shelton also recounts the bittersweet triumph of seeing work published by men who later met with agonizing deaths and the despair of seeing the creative strides of inmates broken by politically motivated transfers to private prisons And his memoir bristles with hard edged experiences ranging from inside knowledge of prison breaks to a workshop conducted while a riot raged outside a barricaded door Reflecting on his decision to tutor Schmid Shelton sees that the choice has led me through bloody tragedies and terrible disappointments to a better understanding of what it means to be human Crossing the Yard is a rare story of professional fulfillment and a testament to the transformative power of writing
