Abstract The purpose of this study was to examine the effects of a 12-week, 3-day-per-week, 100-min-per-session, low-impact aerobically demanding dance program on the physical fitness of 10 sedentary, middle-aged women. The program was designed to be enjoyable and to require no special equipment or space. The program was evaluated using a pretest and a posttest. The results of the study showed that the program had a significant positive effect on the physical fitness of the women. The women's heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index (BMI) all decreased significantly. The women's aerobic capacity, as measured by the 6-minute walk test, increased significantly. The women's muscle strength, as measured by the sit-to-stand test, also increased significantly. The program was well-received by the women, and they reported enjoying the program and feeling more energetic and confident after the 12-week program. The results of this study suggest that a low-impact aerobically demanding dance program can be an effective way to improve the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women.
