13) Suggest an enquiry question or hypothesis that the students might have prepared for their investigation.

How are effective is coastal management in protecting the coastline from erosion?

This answer uses the material at the top of the page and presents it as a legitimate question, a marks.

Always use the resource.

14

14) Suggest the problems that the students choice of locations may have caused

1. The Ocean is quite wide and having the beach 500m away. Location A is a lot more built up than location B meaning there may be more buildings at A than B.

2. Location B seems to be in a slightly better spot to get to than A. There is a rocky coastline which looks dangerous. Like A looks a bit better to get to as it is more built up.

The first part of this response is unclear although there is a basic idea of 'trouble to solve there', which could be developed to make the point clear and garner a second mark for the point. The second part of this response is explicit about the rocks and the subsequent risks involved, 2 marks.

The next lesson things accomplished by using vague terms such as 'difficult' or 'trouble' - why might it be 'difficult'?

15) Explain how the use of Ordnance Survey (OS) maps might have helped the students choose their best beach locations and the three sites on each of those beaches to carry out the profiles.

OS maps allow you to see the profile into the land and so that you to choose it a location that has a nice water point in but you can get a small beach profile and almost like a point. It also allow you to check if any other it have it with it is a beach. It that you can see the to choose the beach profile. The OS map also allow you to see the water and beach location. It also it you also able to choose the gradient very easily. The OS map also beach location help to that you can see to get a beach that has a nice water point in the land.

There is obviously some familiarity with OS maps and several points are made, although some of these are poorly clearly. The answer is rather spelt by the persistent references to water when, certainly in some cases, beaches probably intended to say sand. As with many candidates, the distinction between site and location is not made clear in this.

Learning to Teach Geography in the Secondary School Mary Biddulph, David Lambert, David Balderstone, 2015-05-20

Learning to Teach Geography in the Secondary School has become the widely recommended textbook for student and new teachers of geography. It helps you acquire a deeper understanding of the role, purpose and potential of geography within the secondary curriculum and provides the practical skills needed to design, teach and evaluate stimulating and challenging lessons. It is grounded in the notion of social justice and the idea that all students are entitled to a high quality geography education. The very practical dimension provides you with support structures through which you can begin to develop your own philosophy of teaching and debate key questions about the nature and purpose of the subject in school. Fully revised and updated in light of extensive changes to the curriculum as well as to initial teacher education, the new edition considers the current debates around what we mean by geographical knowledge and what is involved in studying at Masters level. Key chapters explore the fundamentals of teaching and learning geography: Why we teach and what to teach; Understanding and planning the curriculum; Effective pedagogy; Assessment; Developing and using resources; Fieldwork and outdoor learning; Values in school geography; Professional development. Intended as a core textbook and written with university and school based initial teacher education in mind, Learning to Teach Geography in the Secondary School is essential reading for all those who aspire to become effective, reflective teachers. Praise for previous editions of Learning to Teach Geography in the Secondary School: This is a practical and visionary book as well as being superbly optimistic. It has as much to offer the experienced teacher as the novice and could be used to reinvigorate geography departments everywhere. Practical activities and ideas are set within a carefully worked out, authoritative conceptual framework. The Times Educational Supplement: This is a modern, powerful, relevant and comprehensive work, a standard reference for many beginning teachers on geography initial teacher training courses.
