Abstract

For the past 10 years, the American Society of Human Genetics (ASHG) has been the primary organization in the United States that has been responsible for the development of ethical guidelines for the use of genetic information. The ASHG's position on genetic testing has been to support the use of genetic testing for the diagnosis of serious, life-threatening diseases, and to oppose the use of genetic testing for the prediction of disease risk. This position has been based on the ASHG's belief that genetic testing for the prediction of disease risk is not currently accurate enough to be used for the prediction of disease risk, and that the use of genetic testing for the prediction of disease risk is likely to lead to discrimination against individuals who are predicted to be at risk of developing a disease.

Economic growth is the primary goal of most governments. The growth of the economy is measured by the gross domestic product (GDP), which is the total value of all goods and services produced in a country. GDP is calculated by adding up the value of all final goods and services produced in a country. The GDP is a measure of the size of the economy and is used to compare the economic performance of different countries. The GDP is also used to measure the growth of the economy over time. The growth of the economy is measured by the percentage change in the GDP from one year to the next. The growth of the economy is a key indicator of the health of the economy and is used by governments to make decisions about economic policy.
