Development - From cognitive functions to neural underpinnings Korbinian Moeller,Elise Klein,Klaus F Willmes - von

Hinckeldey,Karin Kucian,2015-02-24 Living at the beginning of the 21st century requires being numerate because numerical abilities are not only essential for life prospects of individuals but also for economic interests of post industrial knowledge societies Thus numerical development is at the core of both individual as well as societal interests There is the notion that we are already born with a very basic ability to deal with small numerosities Yet this often called number sense seems to be very restricted approximate and driven by perceptual constraints During our numerical development in formal e g school but also informal contexts e g family street we acquire culturally developed abstract symbol systems to represent exact numerosities in particular number words and Arabic digits refining our numerical capabilities In recent years numerical development has gained increasing research interest documented in a growing number of behavioural neuro scientific educational cross cultural and neuropsychological studies addressing this issue Additionally our understanding of how numerical competencies develop has also benefitted considerably from the advent of different neuro imaging techniques allowing for an evaluation of developmental changes in the human brain In sum we are now starting to put together a more and more coherent picture of how numerical competencies develop and how this development is associated with neural changes as well In the end this knowledge might also lead to a better understanding of the reasons for atypical numerical development which often has grievous consequences for those who suffer from developmental dyscalculia or mathematics learning disabilities Therefore this Research Topic deals with all aspects of numerical development findings from behavioural performance to underlying neural substrates from cross sectional to longitudinal evaluations from healthy to clinical populations To this end we included empirical contributions using different experimental methodologies but also theoretical contributions review articles or opinion papers

Prediction of Job Performance

Robert Vineberg,1982 Literature pertaining to prediction of enlisted military job performance 1952 1980 was reviewed The review excluded studies in which training performance or reenlistment is the criterion Aptitude was the most frequently used predictor and supervisor ratings the most frequent criterion Relationships among classes of criteria and between predictors and criteria were examined Major classes of criteria were job proficiency job performance and suitability to military service The following conclusions are supported by the review 1 For the great majority of jobs job knowledge tests appear to provide the most practical method of objective measurement 2 Because job sample tests are very expensive to construct and administer their use is not practical unless the job is extremely costly or critical and 3 Use of supervisors ratings as the only measure of job performance should be restricted to jobs for which motivation social skill and response to situational requirements are the only attributes worth measuring Two promising approaches to improved prediction are the selective use of miniaturized training and assessment centers and the use of self paced training performance as a predictor The review includes abstracts of the studies that were reviewed
