

Move To An Integrated Supply Chain

Some might argue that it's better to just cut down on the transportation budget rather than finding a way to adapt the supply chain. While that might be easier from the outset, the long-term disadvantage is rather high and can lead to poor customer service, bad rapport, and an overall disjointed delivery network.

A good 3PL can help you to develop a more integrated supply chain that works off better communication and an overall holistic approach to shipping. For a shipper, every part of their business is (and should be) connected. Your sales team is just as important as those in the warehouse or operating the dock. Even if those are all considered to be connected and are even working as a complete unit, transportation is no less a part of that.

All too often, shippers look at their carriers as an afterthought and opt not to include them in the larger operations discussions as well as providing information to them at the last possible minute.

“When an order arrives, ideally the information shouldn't only be broadcast to inventory folks and the distribution center. The information should immediately go to the transportation group, so they can start to coordinate the capacity to move that freight. Too often transportation folks are only notified when the pallets are sitting on the docks,” said Brian Gibson, Executive Director of the Center for Supply Chain Innovation at Auburn University.

While cutting down on the transportation budget might save a little cash up front, it could (and often does) have an impact on other facets of your business.
