

STATES OF MATTER

All matter is made of particles. The state of matter is determined by the speed of the particles and the strength of the attractive forces between them. Energy must be added or removed in order for something to change from one state to another.

SOLID
Solids have definite shape and volume. The particles in a solid vibrate in place because they don't move fast enough to overcome the attraction between them.

LIQUID
Liquids have definite volume but take the shape of the container. The particles in a liquid move around more and slide past each other.

GAS
Gases have no definite shape or volume. The particles in a gas move around independently of each other.

PLASMA
Plasma forms when a gas is extremely hot and ionized. It is a state of matter where the particles are charged and move independently.

PHYSICAL & CHEMICAL CHANGES

PHYSICAL CHANGES

A physical change is a change in which the substance's chemical identity remains the same. The molecules that make up the substance are not changed, but the particles are rearranged.

Examples of Physical Changes

- Freezing: change from liquid to solid (e.g., water to ice).
- Melting: change from solid to liquid (e.g., ice to water).
- Evaporation: change from liquid to gas (e.g., water to steam).
- Condensation: change from gas to liquid (e.g., steam to water).
- Sublimation: change from solid to gas (e.g., dry ice to carbon dioxide gas).

Many physical changes can be reversed, or undone.

CHEMICAL CHANGES

A chemical change is a change in which the substance's chemical identity is changed. The molecules that make up the substance are broken apart and new molecules are formed.

Does That a Chemical Change Has Occurred?

ACIDS & BASES

Acids

Acids are sour, conduct electricity, and react with metals to produce hydrogen gas. Lemons contain acid.

Bases

Bases are bitter, feel slippery, and react with acids to produce soap. Baking soda is a base.

Indicators

Litmus paper is a chemical indicator. It changes color to indicate whether a solution is an acid, a base, or neutral. It does not tell how strong the acid or base is.

Indicator	Acid Color	Base Color	Neutral Color
Litmus	Red	Blue	Purple
Phenolphthalein	Colorless	Pink	Colorless
Bromothymol Blue	Yellow	Blue	Green

Neutral Substances

A neutral substance is neither an acid nor a base. Pure water, for example, is a neutral substance.

A pH scale indicates how acidic or basic a solution is. It is numbered from 0 to 14. Acids have a pH lower than 7. The lower the number, the more acidic a substance is. Bases have a pH greater than 7. The higher the number, the more basic a substance is. Substances with a pH of 7 are neutral.

A universal indicator changes color when it comes in contact with an acidic or basic solution, changing the color to the color on a pH color chart indicating the pH level of the solution.

Commonly Used Acids: Hydrochloric Acid, Sulfuric Acid, Nitric Acid, Acetic Acid, Citric Acid, Lactic Acid, Phosphoric Acid.

Commonly Used Bases: Sodium Hydroxide, Potassium Hydroxide, Ammonia, Calcium Hydroxide, Magnesium Hydroxide, Aluminum Hydroxide.

MATTER

Matter is anything that takes up space and has mass. Matter can be categorized as a pure substance or a mixture.

Pure Substance

A pure substance has the same composition throughout, and pure substances often occur naturally. Elements and compounds are pure substances.

Mixture

A mixture forms when two or more substances are physically combined. The parts of a mixture can be physically separated. All of the substances keep their original properties.

Homogeneous Mixture

The parts of a homogeneous mixture are evenly distributed.

The parts of a heterogeneous mixture are not evenly distributed.

Examples of Mixtures

- Homogeneous: Salt water, Air, Sugar water, Vinegar.
- Heterogeneous: Sand and water, Oil and water, Fruit salad, Granite.
