Mozambique's Experience In Building A National Extension System:

Farm management extension services: a review of global experience Kahan, D.G.,2007 This Occasional Paper presents the findings of a global review of farm management extension services The specific intentions were to i assess the current status of farm management training and extension programmes ii identify constraints and issues iii review the performance and impact and iv propose recommendations for the improved provision of farm management extension advice The Rise and Fall of Training and Visit Extension Jock R. Anderson,2006 The paper reviews the origins and evolution of the Training and Visit T V extension system which was promoted by the World Bank in 1975 98 in over 50 developing countries The discussion seeks to clarify the context within which the approach was implemented and to analyze the causes for its lack of sustainability and its ultimate abandonment The paper identifies some of the challenges faced by the T V approach as being typical of a large public extension system where issues of scale interaction with the agricultural research systems inability to attribute benefits weak accountability and lack of political support tend to lead to incentive problems among staff and managers of extension and limited budgetary resources The different incentives and outlook of domestic stakeholders and external donor agencies are also reviewed The main cause of the T V system s disappearance is attributed to the incompatibility of its high recurrent costs with the limited budgets available domestically leading to fiscal unsustainability The paper concludes with some lessons that apply to donor driven public extension initiatives and more generally to rural development fads The role of timely independent and rigorous evaluative studies is specifically highlighted World Bank web site Empowering smallholder farmers' organizations through non-public extension service providers: A case study and lessons from Mozambique Gêmo, Hélder R.,Babu, Suresh Chandra,2019-02-21 The role and impact of non state extension services providers have not been studied adequately In this paper we assess the performance of the non State extension service provision through farmers organization FOs in Mozambique Using participating methods focused group discussions and key informant interviews we provide an assessment of extension services provision to FOs The result indicates only 3% of the 1264 surveyed FOs were categorized as type A the highest FOs rating scale used by services providers SPs in the three regions of the country Effective monitoring and evaluation regular analytical participatory at field level and close working interaction between the Public Agricultural Extension Services PAES and the SPs were of paramount importance to track the progress made in empowering the FOs SPs pro activeness and competence were critical factors to adequately address the various training needs of the different categories of FOs and local services providers SPs financial autonomy was key to compensate for the delays in the disbursements by the PAES The selection criteria for the participating farmers trainees from targeted FOs makes a difference Younger and more literate farmers including women have shown greater motivation and engagement in the training sessions Outsourcing can be a valuable alternative for the provision of extension services if it targets specific intervention areas for example training for FOs a limited number of activities well defined deliverables including quality and sustainability issues and timelines Post training and post project actions at the policy level and extension services providers are required to contribute to the sustainability of the investment made Based on these findings the paper documents several operational lessons from the implementation of the program

Community-based adaptation Hannah Reid, 2017-10-02 Community based adaptation CBA to climate change is based on local priorities needs knowledge and capacities Early CBA initiatives were generally implemented by non government organisations NGOs and operated primarily at the local level Many used bottom up participatory processes to identify the climate change problem and appropriate responses Small localised stand alone initiatives are insufficient to address the scale of challenges climate change will bring however The causes of vulnerability such as market or service access or good governance also often operate beyond the project level Larger organisations and national governments have therefore started to implement broader CBA programmes which provide opportunities to scale up responses and integrate CBA into higher levels of policy and planning This book shows that it is possible for CBA to remain centred on local priorities but not necessarily limited to work implemented at the local level Some chapters address the issue of mainstreaming CBA into government policy and planning processes or into city or sectoral level plans e g on agriculture Others look at how gender and children s issues should be mainstreamed into adaptation planning itself and others describe how tools can be applied and finance delivered for effective mainstreaming This book was published as a special issue of Climate and Development

W. van den Ban,Ranajit Kumar Samanta,2006 Contributed articles Mozambique's Experience in Building a National Extension System Helder Gemo,Carl K. Eicher,Solomon Teclemariam,2005 Agricultural extension services are undergoing rapid change in many countries with a shift in funding and management from the public to the private sector This is especially true in Africa where donors from industrial countries and more recently from the middle income developing countries such as Chile have historically promoted and financed those extension models Currently African nations are being encouraged to import the Farmer Field School extension model which is meeting with some success in Asia Mozambique a former Portuguese colony became independent in 1975 but was wracked by civil war in the 1980s It was unable to establish its public extension service until 1987 The authors analyze the growth and evolution of extension from 1987 to 2004 as provided by public private and NGO sources in Mozambique This work highlights the Ministry of Agriculture s drive to develop and test both local and imported extension models and share its experience with other African countries Outsourcing Agricultural Advisory Services Willem
