Abstract: The authors discuss the importance of the relationship between the individual and the community in the context of the social sciences. They argue that the individual is not a passive recipient of social forces, but an active participant in the process of social change. The authors also discuss the importance of the relationship between the individual and the community in the context of the social sciences. They argue that the individual is not a passive recipient of social forces, but an active participant in the process of social change.

Students' English usage must be presented across a combination of fields even though they are allowed within each field, for example, in a table of regions and companies. Duplicate regions and duplicate companies are allowed but multiple field indicators requires a specific, non-comparable combination (e.g., region, company).

1. In the Labels Design view, choose TABLE PICKLIST, PICKLIST, PICKLIST.
2. Type an INDEX NAME (not the field name).
3. Select a FIELD NAME (and SORT ORDER if necessary).
4. For each additional field, name INDEX NAME (and Sort for the next FIELD NAME and Sort (order)).
5. Select the INDEX TYPE for the multi-field index from the INDEX PICKLIST in the lower grid.
6. Click the DEFINITION button on the right.

- Tables are joined typically by combining the primary key field of the primary table to its foreign key, represented in the secondary table. This usually creates a one-to-many relationship, but other types are possible:
 - One-to-many - each primary table record is related to many secondary table records but vice versa, there is only one record in primary. For example, when a customer is related to multiple orders.
 - One-to-one - each primary table record is related to only one secondary table record and vice versa. This type is uncommon but may happen, for example, when a customer is related to a discount.
 - Many-to-many - each primary table record is related to many secondary table records and vice versa. There is not uniqueness there from an informational, or junction, table is always required to transform a single many-to-many into two one-to-many relationships. Order details could be used as a junction table, for example, to relate one order to many products, and one product to many orders.
1. The primary table field must be set as a primary key in the ACCESS2010 property set to: YES, YES-ONLY, or YES-NO.
2. The secondary table field must match the data type of the primary table field.
3. Create table relationships, REFERENCE creating queries, forms, and reports.
4. To help organize relationships, give primary and secondary table the same name.
5. To show which relationship type is operating, look at both ends of a table connection.
