enteridis are responsible for non typhoidal infections leading to gastroenteritis and focal disease Salmonella infections are one of the leading foods borne infections across the world resulting in socio economic and hospital burden There are continuous and ongoing efforts in understanding the structural features and mode of action of these pathogens vital in driving scientific discovery towards prevention and treatment strategies against these infections Through this research topic we aim to explore the scientific gaps associated with our understanding of Salmonella spp and its importance to design better drug and treatment modalities

Ecology, Virulence and Detection of Pathogenic and Pandemic Vibrio Parahaemolyticus Pendru Raghunath,Iddya Karunasagar,Indrani Karunasagar,2016-08-15 Vibrio parahaemolyticus is a gram negative halophilic bacterium that occurs in the coastal and estuarine environments worldwide and is implicated in several cases of seafood born gastroenteritis around the globe However not all strains of V parahaemolyticus are pathogenic Clinical isolates of V parahaemolyticus most often produce either the thermostable direct haemolysin TDH or TDH related haemolysin TRH encoded by tdh and trh genes respectively A pandemic clone of O3 K6 which was first detected in Kolkata India has been responsible for many outbreaks in Asia and the USA With the emergence of pandemic clone of V parahaemolyticus this organism has assumed significance Although most of the V parahaemolyticus outbreaks are invariably related to seafood consumption pathogenic strains are rarely isolated from seafood Virulent strains producing TDH or TRH and the pandemic clone which is responsible for most of the outbreaks that have occurred after 1996 have been rarely isolated from seafood and other environmental samples This could be due to the occurrence of pathogenic strains in the estuarine environment at a lower level compared to non pathogenic strains Another reason can be that the pathogenic stains are more sensitive to dystropic conditions in the aquatic environment and rapidly become non culturable Similarity in growth kinetics between virulent and non virulent strains also made the isolation of virulent strains from the aquatic environment difficult Several studies were done to determine the factors responsible for an increased virulence and persistance of pandemic clone However none of those studies were conclusive Several researchers have proposed various genetic markers for specific detection of pandemic clone of V parahaemolyticus But many of those genetic markers were found to be unreliable Recently seven genomic islands VPai 1 to VPai 7 unique to pandemic clone were identified This Research Topic is dedicated to improve our current understanding of ecology pathogenesis and detection of pathogenic and pandemic clone of V parahaemolyticus and will also strive to identify areas of future development

One Health Surveillance in Practice: Experiences of Integration among Human Health, Animal Health, Environmental Health, and Food Safety Sectors Joaquin Prada,Guido Benedetti,Flemming Scheutz,Rene Hendriksen,Nadia Boisen,2024-03-14 Recognizing that the human and animal health are interconnected brings along the challenge of integrating their respective health systems including routine disease surveillance activities outbreak management and emergency preparedness However approaches in these different sectors are still unaligned in many ways including their respective agendas both at the country and the supranational levels

Several initiatives have been launched to study and tackle this problem. Since the early 2000s the World Health Organization (WHO), the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations (FAO) and the World Organization of Animal Health (OIE) paved the road of multi sectorial One Health approaches and collaborations leading to the recent publication of the Tripartite Zoonoses Guide. In Europe the One Health European Joint Programme aims at fostering the transdisciplinary cooperation of activities that are relevant to One Health within and across European countries. Furthermore various scientific networks and consortia have been set up to bring together professionals and experiences from different sectors. Integration is key to the One Health agenda and to the challenge of future preparedness and response to foodborne pathogens and other emerging threats both from an epidemiological and microbiological perspective. This Research Topic aims at describing first hand successful inspirational and possibly visionary experiences about the integration of approaches, procedures and methodologies for One Health surveillance across the human health, animal health, environmental health and food safety sectors at the local, national or supranational levels.
