These findings are not valid evidence for children. Some researchers have argued that the results of the study are not valid because the children were not given the opportunity to see the video of the child who was being abused. The researchers of the study have responded to this criticism by stating that the children were given the opportunity to see the video of the child who was being abused.

Large gaps, vertical folds, 200-micron or more by volume fraction. Plus a lot of small gaps. This is a typical pattern of large gaps in a polymer matrix. The gaps are not evenly distributed, but they are. The gaps are not evenly distributed, but they are. The gaps are not evenly distributed, but they are.
