Abstract: A parenting style is a psychological construct representing standard strategies that parents use in their child rearing. Parenting styles are the representation of how parents respond to and make demands on their children. Research has often studied parenting style from the perspective of parents. This study attempts to approach the phenomena from the perspective of both parents and children. 160 fathers, 160 mothers and 160 children from urban and rural middle income families were questioned on responsiveness and demandingness of parents. A simple tool was developed, pilot tested and used. The results indicated that the differences between parents and children were marked among rural sample, but were found even among urban parents and children. In general, lesser number of parents felt they were authoritarian than the perceptions of their children. More parents felt they were democratic and permissive than what their children perceived.

Keywords: parenting style, authoritarian, democratic, permissive

1. Introduction & Review

A parenting style is a psychological construct representing standard strategies that parents use in their child rearing. Parenting styles are the representation of how parents respond to and make demands on their children

Parental responsiveness defined as "the extent to which parents intentionally foster individuality, self-regulation, and self-assertion by being attuned, supportive, and acquiescent to children's special needs and demands" (Baumrind, 1996, p. 410, cited in Grolnick, 2003, p. 6).

Parental demandingness is referred to as "the claims parents make on children to become integrated into the family whole by their maturity demands, supervision, disciplinary efforts and willingness to confront the child who disobeys" (Baumrind, 1996, p. 411, cited in Grolnick, 2003, p. 6).

Parenting styles affect children in many ways. Research indicates that parents tend to see themselves as democratic more often while children may not see their parents in such a light. These divergent perceptions could impact the manner in which child outcomes pan out.

Research results showed that adolescents from authoritative families applied most adaptive achievement strategies characterized by low levels of failure expectations, task irrelevant behaviour and passivity, and the use of self-enhancing attributions. Adolescents from neglectful families, in turn, applied maladaptive strategies characterized by high levels of task-irrelevant behaviour, passivity and a lack of self enhancing attributions (Kaisa aarnola, Haä kan stattin and Jari-erik nurmi, 2000)

Another interesting study found that only bullies and only delinquents had different parenting correlates; only bullies had authoritarian parents and disagreed with their parents, whereas only delinquents had conflictual and low supportive parents (Baldry & Farrington, 2000)

Authoritative mothering was found to relate to higher self-esteem and life-satisfaction and to lower depression. Paternal parenting styles was also related to psychological adjustment, however, although the advantage of authoritative mothering over permissive mothering was evident for all outcomes assessed, for paternal styles the advantage was less defined and only evident for depression (Milevsky, Schlechter Neter & Keehn, 2007)

Maternal authoritativeness was related to a mastery orientation. Maternal authoritarianism and permissiveness were related to a performance orientation among high school children (Gonzalez, Doan Holbein & Quilter, 2002)

This study examined the relationship between children's perception of dissimilarity in parenting styles, and internalizing and externalizing problems in children. Children's perceived dissimilarity in parental emotional warmth was associated with internalizing and externalizing problems ($\beta = 0.092, p < 0.05$; $\beta = 0.091, p < 0.05$). Perceived dissimilarity between parents' overprotection is associated with externalizing problems ($\beta = 0.097, p < 0.05$). Perceived dissimilarity between parenting styles is associated with externalizing and internalizing problems, over and above the effects of the level of the parenting styles. The results highlight the negative consequences of perceived dissimilarity between parents (Berkien, Louwerse, Verhulst, and van der Ende (2012)

Strong relationship between children's school achievement and parenting attitude and style was reported. Findings from the review revealed that authoritative parenting styles were associated with higher levels of children's school achievement, though findings remain inconsistent across

Parenting in Modern Societies, 2023-11-02 This book debates the high impact modern societies have on the way we raise children Although problems such as family dysfunction work-family imbalance and migration due to war violence and poverty are not new their consequences for children's well being and mental health are aggravated by the lack of effective social support networks affecting many children and families living in contemporaneous urban areas. The proverb 'It takes a village to raise a child' is as valid now as it was in the early history of less complex communities. However, extended families and the social environment of villages have been substituted by a system of welfare and childcare institutions that in many cases fail to provide the appropriate care, education and support the children need. Job demanding competitive societies where career achievement and wealth become the definition of success force parents to the duality of choosing between family and career and depending on others to parent their children. Likewise, social inequality compels many parents to work in never ending shifts that add to the hours they spend commuting to their workplaces. Sometimes parents are forced to migrate leaving their children behind. Children learn to survive in the absence of their parents and to deal with small or inexistent parental emotional investment. The parent-child relationship and attachment necessities are impacted in ways that will affect children for the rest of their lives. Alternatively, migrant children accompanying their parents to a new host country may feel the shock of a normative society with cultural values different from the ones they left behind. Parenting behaviour and style may then be considered inappropriate, challenging parents' ability to educate and pass their values to the offspring. This book is an academic reflection on these controversies.

The Developing Person Through the Life Span (paper) Kathleen Stassen Berger, 2004-03-26

The new edition of The Developing Person Through the Lifespan combines theory and the most up to date research with practical illustration in order to engage readers in the study of development. It addresses the fundamental issues from a chronological point of view and covers the entirety of the lifespan not just infancy or adolescence. The book's enhanced pedagogy works alongside the author's lively narrative voice to ensure that this edition remains as user friendly if not more so than its predecessors. Resources in Education, 1998. Proceedings of the Eighth Saudi Students Conference in the UK Neil E. A Comparison of Eastern and Western Parenting Low Yiu Tsang Andrew, 2019-03-06 Parenting adolescents is a challenging task for parents Professionals offer a range of support and parenting programmes to support parents However the importance of culturally adapting parenting programmes to benefit parents and their adolescent children hasn t always been understood This book provides a comparison of East and West parenting approaches and parenting programmes to show how vital a culturally sensitive approach is to the positive development of the parent adolescent relationship It offers a comprehensive overview of current theories and research on parenting adolescents It focuses on comparing the differences in parenting style and practice between Chinese parents and their Western counterparts and the policy context in Chinese culture with that in the West It also offers guidance on how to conduct an evaluation of parenting programmes and how to adapt them for the right cultural setting Postgraduate students studying parenting developmental psychology or social work will find this work particularly useful as will researchers in any of these areas

New Directions and Trends in Parenting Research Nicolette Vanessa Roman, Yosi Yaffe, Dorit Alt, 2024-08-28 For many decades parenting has been at the center of interest for practitioners and researchers interested in child social and psychological development The body of research on children's socialization has primarily focused on traditional parenting styles and their related practices in the spirit of Baumrind's and others conceptualization of parental control and power assertion e.g. authoritative, authoritarian and permissive This research has revealed many domains of children's and adolescents' adjustment and wellbeing that are affected by and affecting parenting quality but intriguing new parental approaches and types have recently emerged in research literature such as digital parenting, transcendent parenting, parental alienation, overparenting, helicopter parenting, tiger parenting and several others about which more is yet to be learned Likewise in recent years our understanding of the role played by factors such as culture, ethnicity, environmental and familial background in the relationship between parenting styles and children's psychological wellbeing and mental health has greatly improved However the question of whether or not there is a global uniform optimal parenting remains controversial as more studies are required to better understand the varying impacts of parenting on the child's well-being within different demographic and familial contexts This is especially true for families with special needs children i.e. children and adolescents with developmental and psychological disabilities where research on parenting styles in particular is understudied Additionally in the present digital era there is growing interest in relatively new behavioral outcomes in children and adolescents such as sedentary behaviors including eating and nutrition habits, online behaviors and digital activity vs physical activity These and other important contemporary aspects in children's functioning and behaviors contribute to developmental mental health and further establishing our knowledge regarding the parental role in these contexts is essential
