Embracing Reason Daniel Chazan,Sandra Callis,Michael Lehman,2009-12-16 This book tells a single story in many voices about a serious and sustained set of changes in mathematics teaching practice in a high school and how those efforts influenced and were influenced by a local university It challenges us to rethink boundaries between theory and practice and the relative roles of teachers and university faculty in educational endeavors

Guiding Curriculum Development M. Scott Norton,2016-11-02 Top down mandates concerning the curriculum of the school leave no room for program creativity and program commitment Yet principals and teachers are held accountable for student achievement results Constitutionally powers not granted to the United States are reserved to the States or to the people The book s primary purposes center on the need for placing the responsibility for determining student curriculum and academic achievement the local school level whereby school personnel determine the individual student s personal interests and needs and design a curricular program for each student that fosters personnel success The creative abilities of teachers are inhibited in attempts to implement top down mandates that set forth academic content and instructional methods set forth by federal and state agencies If learning programs and instructional methods are to be designed to meet the individual interests and needs of the learner who is in the best position to determine such needs We believe that the social mental and physical needs of children and youth are determined best by local educational professionals This book sets forth the foundations of practice that will serve these purposes
