- Multi-physics simulation
success

Report highlights

Successfully is the overwhelming challenge today by product designers – making it harder to evaluate the impact of different design alternatives.

When the need to virtualize the product development lifecycle is becoming a reality, the multi-physics and design process simulation has become an essential element of product design and delivery. Furthermore, simulation is the only way to ensure that the product is designed to meet the requirements of the customer.

Implementing a successful simulation platform requires a multi-physics approach. This global perspective enables the design team to optimize the product for multiple disciplines.

As the product development lifecycle becomes more complex, the need for a consolidated multi-physics simulation platform is becoming more apparent. Specifically, it will help in the design of the product, the development of the product, and the delivery of the product. The multi-physics simulation platform will be the key to success in the product development lifecycle.
