

ENDOCRINE SYSTEM

Endocrine System: WORKING TOGETHER

Each organ system works on other systems within the body to do its "job". Our bodies learn just some of the ways that the endocrine system interacts with other organ systems.

Nervous System

Circulatory System

Endocrine System: FACTS

Endocrine System: PROBLEMS

Most of the time, the endocrine system works perfectly well. However, sometimes problems can arise.

Diabetes

Diabetes is a condition that causes high blood glucose (sugar) levels. It is caused by the body being unable to either produce or use the hormone insulin. So, the glucose in the blood gets stuck or "stuck". Symptoms include increased thirst, weight loss, frequent urination, blurred vision, slow wound healing, and changes in mood. Diabetes can lead to long-term complications such as heart disease, kidney failure, and blindness.

Endocrine System: KEY TERMS

Term	Definition
Endocrine System	Network of endocrine glands that make, store, and release hormones.
Hormones	Chemical messengers that carry information and instructions from one cell to another.

Endocrine System: HORMONES

Hormones are chemical signals. Hormones are released by a gland into the bloodstream. They travel through the bloodstream to target cells. When they reach the target cells, they bind to receptors on the cell surface. This binding triggers a series of events that cause the cell to respond. The response can be to release more hormones, to produce a protein, or to change the cell's metabolism.

Endocrine System: FIGHT-OR-FLIGHT

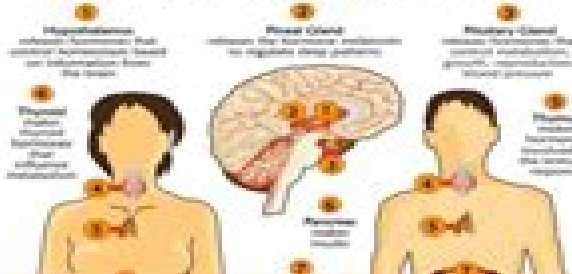

The fight-or-flight response is a reaction that occurs in the body when we are really frightened. The body's fight-or-flight response is the body's way of reacting to a dangerous situation. When we feel scared, our heart rate increases, our breathing becomes faster, and our muscles become tense. These changes help us to react quickly to a dangerous situation. The fight-or-flight response is controlled by the endocrine system. The adrenal glands release hormones that trigger the fight-or-flight response.

When we are not frightened, our heart rate is slow and our breathing is calm. When we are frightened, our heart rate increases and our breathing becomes faster. This is because the endocrine system releases hormones that trigger the fight-or-flight response.

Endocrine System: GLANDS

A gland is a structure that produces and releases substances that perform a specific function in the body. There are many glands in the body. Some glands are endocrine glands, which release hormones into the bloodstream. Other glands are exocrine glands, which release substances into the body through a duct. The endocrine system is made up of the glands that release hormones into the bloodstream.

Endocrine System: FEEDBACK LOOPS

Endocrine activities are regulated by complex feedback loops. These feedback loops help the body maintain a stable internal environment. When a hormone level is too high or too low, the body releases a signal that tells the gland to stop or start producing the hormone. This signal is called a feedback loop.

There are two types of feedback loops: negative feedback loops and positive feedback loops. Negative feedback loops are the most common. They help the body maintain a stable internal environment. Positive feedback loops are less common. They help the body respond to a sudden change in the environment.

One example of a negative feedback loop is the regulation of blood glucose levels. When blood glucose levels are too high, the pancreas releases insulin. Insulin helps the body use glucose for energy. When blood glucose levels are too low, the pancreas releases glucagon. Glucagon helps the body release glucose from the liver. This feedback loop helps the body maintain a stable blood glucose level.
